AUSTRALIA IS FIGHTING MAD; WANTS U.S. AID

Canberra, Australia, March 14 (AP)—A grave warning that the Americas would be "wide open" if Japan conquers Australia and a plea for the closest cooperation with Australia were broadcast directly to the people of the United States today by Prime Minister John Curtin, leader of his country's fight for life against Japan.

"Australia is the last bastion between the west coast of America and the Japanese—if Australia goes, the Americas are wide open," he declared.

Saving West Coast

Lashing at speculation that the Japanese might pass up Australia and that they could be met and routed in India, he asserted:

"I say to you that saving Australia is saving America's west coast. If you believe anything to the contrary you delude yourselves."

Before speaking to his "comrades in this war" in the United States, the prime minister announced that Australia presumably had suffered another severe naval reverse—the apparent loss of the 6,980-ton cruiser Perth, heroine of numerous battles in the middle east, and the 1,060-ton sloop Yarra, with their 833 men.

The ships fought successfully and without damage in the battles of the Java sea, Curtin said, but they have not been reported since leaving Java for home and they are presumed to have been sunk.

Japs Claim Two

(The Japanese claimed March 3 that the Perth and her sister ship, the Hobart, were among 23 United Nations warships sunk off Java on the week-end of March 1.)

Japan, meanwhile, continued her invasion moves toward Australia. Japanese Zero (navy) fighters attacked Port Moresby, New Guinea, with machine guns while other Japanese planes attacked a point 60 miles to the west of the port, near the Yule Island mission, it was announced.

The Australians, for their part, announced their planes heavily damaged grounded Japanese planes in a raid Thursday on a Japanese airdrome at Rabaul, New Britain.

Curtin in his broadcast said Australians had looked to America for "counsel and advice."

Fighting Mad

"It is a matter of some regret to us," he continued, "that even now, after 95 days of Japan's staggering advance south and ever south, we have not obtained first hand contact with America.

"Therefore, we propose sending to you our minister for external affairs, Dr. H. V. Evatt, so we may benefit from his discussions with your authorities.

"Evatt will not go to you as a mendicant . . . he will go to tell you that we are fighting mad and that our people have a government that is governing with orders and not weak-kneed suggestions . . ."

WOMEN TO HEAR IRISH PROGRAM

NEW OFFICER ON DUTY AT COLLEGE

The purpose of the school is to give special training to students who are majoring in economics and have applied for commissions in the Quartermaster department.

HOMEMAKERS HAVE PART IN WAR OFFENSE

What can I do to help national defense?

Eager women and club groups throughout the nation are putting that question to food consultants in Washington. Cooking School audiences in state after state ask the same thing of their visiting home economist.

And the uniform answer to the universal query is so undramatic that it almost discourages the average questioner. Here it is:

"Start a nutrition movement. Start it in you own family first."

Miss Ruth Bean, who will conduct The Gettysburg Times' four-day Cooking School echoes the sound nutrition advice of outstanding food authorities in Washington. She will emphasize the national importance of the American homemaker's job throughout the timely course next Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings in the Hotel Gettysburg annex.

Serve Right Food

In calling American homemakers to the colors, Miss Bean asks them to put their own familiar weapons of knowledge to use by serving their families the right food to achieve the highest level of what Dr. Henry C. Sherman, of Columbia university, calls "positive buoyant health."

Doctor Sherman, one of America's leading experts on nutrition, feels that our knowledge of nutrition is now entering a new era. He points to the educational work of the nutritional advisory committee of the National Defense commission, in which newspapers are cooperating, to give the homemakers of the nation the most thorough information on how to provide effective food.

The Times' food specialist, Miss Bean, is convinced that conscientious modern homemakers already have improved national health by stepping up the consumption of fruit juices, tomato juice, green vegetables and milk.

Learn To Cook

This friendly advisor, who lectured at last year's Cooking School here, is quick to say "well done" to her associate homemakers, while urging expansion of the present home nutrition program. She relates proper cooking methods directly to health building and urges her listeners: "Learn how to cook expertly NOW."

Be among the guests who enjoy daily gifts, good foods and major awards at The Gettysburg Times' ninth Cooking School from next Tuesday to Friday, inclusive, in the annex. The sessions will start at 7:30 o'clock each evening, with the doors of the hall opening at 6:30 o'clock. Children under the age of 14 years will not be admitted to the annex.

Mrs. Herbert Zepp, Gettysburg R. 4, has been admitted as a patient to the Warner hospital. Those discharged were Miss Margaret McMillan, West Middle street; Mrs. Susan Bishop, Gettysburg R. D., and Joan Culver, Hanover street.

Miss Helen Boyd, Gettysburg R. 1, was operated upon at the Warner hospital today for the removal of her tonsils.

Mrs. Quay V. Cullison, East Middle street, has been admitted as a patient. Those discharged were Mrs. Merle Sanders and infant daughter, Nancy Jane, Gettysburg R. D.; Mrs. Earl Welty and infant son, Richard Eugene, Harney, and Mrs. Maurice Hobbs and infant daughter, Nancy Euphemia, Emmitsburg.

J. Floyd Slaybaugh, teacher in York Springs borough, presided Friday evening. Ruth Deatrick, Latimore township teacher, served as secretary for the meeting.

640,000 STATE MEN AWAITING DRAFT LOTTERY

Harrisburg, March 14 (AP)—Completion of serial numbering for 640,000 Pennsylvania men who registered for selective service last February 16 found the state ready and waiting today for the national draft lottery Tuesday in Washington.

State selective service officials said all arrangements have been made and predicted an orderly and rapid follow-up by local boards who must assign each man in their district his proper order number.

Colonel Benjamin Evans, state director, said registrants should not be confused by the letter "T" which they will find preceding their serial number. He explained the "T" will stand for "third registration."

The state's 422 local boards this week finished assigning each man serial numbers, beginning at T-1 and running to T-6,000 if that high a number is necessary.

Lottery on Tuesday

Starting at 6 p. m., Tuesday in the nation's capital, the 6,000 numbers will be drawn from the famed glass bowl in proceedings expected to last some 10 hours. The first drawing took 18 hours and required 9,000 numbers.

The order in which the capsuled numbers are drawn will determine the order of liability for service. Each registrant will be assigned an order number by his loal board, based on the order in which his serial number was drawn at the nation's capital.

The order numbers will run from 10,000 to 16,000 since the total order numbers drawn in the first two lotteries approximated 10,000.

General Lewis B. Hershey, national director, has authorized newspaper publication of names and order numbers in communities "as such publication will not reveal exactly the total number of registrants enrolled throughout the nation on the February registration —information which is still restricted by the War department."

Court's Ruling Ends M'Glynn Divorce Case

In response to the presentation of a petition by Anne (Keet) McGlynn, libellant in the divorce action against Dr. P. J. McGlynn, the Adams county court has ordered that the case be "discontinued and ended."

The ruling was given by Judge W. C. Sheely this morning and filed in the office of the county prothonotary.

The petition presented to the court said, in part, that the libellant and respondent (Dr. McGlynn) have "amicably adjusted their differences and desire that an order of discontinuance be entered."

The libel in divorce had been filed here on December 30, 1941. Charles W. Wolf, Esq., was acting as divorce master.

HOSPITAL GETS NEW EQUIPMENT; RATES REVISED

Rate adjustments and additional dictaphone equipment for the Warner hospital were voted at the March meeting of the board of directors, Friday evening. President E. H. Markley presided with 16 directors in attendance.

The board, upon the recommendation of the medical staff and in view of the fact that "complete laboratory and X-ray equipment now is available at the hospital," authorized certain schedules of rates for complete laboratory and X-ray services at fixed fees with a limit on the maximum charge. This action was taken as a means of assisting in the making of complete case studies, the board members said.

The directors appropriated $150 for a transcribing machine and new cylinders to increase the dictaphone equipment in the surgical department. This new equipment, together with other additions donated by Drs. Bruce N. Wolff and Roy W. Gifford, now makes possible complete facilities for the making of case histories by members of the medical staff, the board announced.

February Report

The board also announced that Doctors Wolff and Gifford have presented the hospital with a skeleton, already nicknamed "Phoebe" at the hospital in spite of the fact that the skeleton once belonged to a male. The skeleton is for use in the X-ray department at the hospital.

The report of the hospital superintendent, Miss Sara J. Clark, for the busy month of February follows: Admissions, 113; patients discharged, 108; births, 27; deaths, three; number patients remaining at the end of the month, 36; average number of patients per day, 38; radiographs, 204; laboratory examinations, 513; operations, 50; accidents, 55; intravenous administrations, 17; blood transfusions, five; basal metabolisms, 11; radium treatments, eight; treatments and dressings, 76.

County Soldiers Meet In South

March 10, 1942

The Gettysburg Times,
Dear Sirs:

I have been receiving the paper regularly and enjoying it immensely. Thanks a lot. It sure helps out.

Last week-end Pvt. Clair Zimmerman and myself enjoyed a trip to Savannah, Georgia. We also had a reunion with another Adams county soldier, Sgt. John M. F. McCleaf, and his wife, who live at Beaufort, South Carolina. On the trip I met Dr. M. P. Kennedy, one of the outstanding southern colored physicians. He is a son of the late Dr. N. B. Kennedy, first negro doctor to pass a civil service examination to become a physician, and is a personal friend of Dwight Thomas, of Gettysburg.

Yours sincerely,
PVT. WILLARD C. WEIKERT,
5th Artillery Group,
Battery C,
Paris Island, South Carolina

Courage

Moscow, March 14 (AP)—An unexploded shell two inches in diameter was removed from the side of a Red army soldier in a delicate operation unique in the history of surgery, the Tass news agency reported today.

The soldier, Nikolai Bystrikov, is recovering.

He was hit in February by a German mortar projectile which penetrated his right shoulder and buried itself in his side.

Bystrikov, realizing an explosion might occur at any moment, warned stretcher bearers away and tried twice to kill himself with a hand grenade, but was too weak to do so, Tass said.

The stretcher bearers carried him back to a crude field hospital, where Dr. M. M. Pakhman decided to operate.

The doctor ordered the staff to leave, but all insisted on staying to assist and the shell was removed without incident.

"OPEN" WINTER HELPS GAME IN ADAMS COUNTY

Wild life in Adams county came through the winter in good physical condition with an open winter and adequate feed supplies in their favor, Leo Bushman, county game protector, told members of the county Fish and Game association at their March meeting Friday evening.

He stated that there are more pheasants in Adams county now than at any time in many years. More than 300 rabbits and an equal number of pheasants were released in the county last month, he reported.

A ton of scratch feed and 3,500 pounds of corn were bought by Bushman for winter feeding of game in this county but not all of the supply was needed, the sportsmen were told.

A "good number of deer" have been seen in mountains of Adams county already this year, hunters stated Friday evening.

Place Fish in Streams

F. Mark Bream reported that on Friday 1,400 rainbow and 1,100 brook trout measuring from six to 18 inches were liberated in trout streams of the county including Birch Run and Carbaugh's Run. Other reports given later disclosed that Conewago and Middle Creeks and other approved streams also have received trout this year.

On recommendation of Vernon Corle the association voted to investigate the possibility of stocking county streams with bluegills.

Philip Sharpe, writer for national sports magazines, told the county group the stocks of new guns have been "frozen" by government order and that restrictions are expected on the sales of second hand guns. Ammunition will be scarce, he said, and manufacture of fishing tackle has been stopped and those factories being converted to war production. There will be no more silk or nylon fishing lines, he added.

Mr. Bushman showed two reels of motion pictures he had secured from the state Game commission. One was on game refuge development and the other on hunting scenes and wild life.

It was announced a group of sportsmen in the county are circulating a petition asking for permission from the state to train dogs throughout the year on the Zaun and Bell farms near Hunterstown.

Huge Structure Is Leveled By $100,000 Blaze

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the local plant of the Central Chemical Corporation of Pennsylvania with all its machinery, hundreds of tons of fertilizers, feeds, insecticides and seeds, east of town on the Lincoln Highway. It was formerly known as the Oyler and Spangler fertilizer plant.

Discovered shortly after 6:30 o'clock the flames raced through the big two- and three-story frame building and reduced it to blazing ruins in an hour.

Visible For Miles

At the height of the fire great masses of flame billowed skyward for a hundred feet or more from almost all sections of the structure which measured about 55 by 250 feet. A huge column of smoke and sparks made the fire visible for miles around.

Estimates of the probable loss ranged from $75,000 to $100,000 and upward. Samuel G. Spangler and J. Price Oyler, managers of the plant, said they could not estimate the damage until an inspection of the ruins could be made and an inventory taken of the stocks of chemicals, fertilizers, feed and spray materials which filled the structure.

Trucker Discovers Flames

The cause of the fire remained a mystery. The flames were discovered first by Charles Sell, a trucker from Schantz's orchards, near Allentown, who had arrived early for a load of spray materials. He was dozing in his truck at the north side of the building waiting for the plant to open for the day. He was aroused by the crackling flames shooting from the roof at the northeast section of the structure.

He drove his truck to the farm house just west of the plant where he summoned L. Guy Sterner. The alarm was then telephoned to the fire company from Hartzell's service station nearby.

Gettysburg firemen responded with all of their equipment. Later firemen arrived from New Oxford and Biglerville.

Traffic Is Blocked

Gettysburg firemen laid 3,400 feet of hose to the fire from the Zinkand pond, about 500 feet north of the plant, and with the use of a Y-connection turned three big lines of water on the blaze. Smaller lines from booster tanks were used to protect buildings along the west side of the Hunterstown road.

Traffic on the Lincoln highway was blocked for an hour or more with state motor police in charge. From the outset traffic on the Hunterstown road was cut off and when the fire was over that road was blocked by debris of the west section of the destroyed building.

A large two-story frame, metal-sheeted storage shed, 50 feet to the rear of the main structure, was closely watched by firemen and was protected from the fire.

Threaten Other Buildings

At one stage of the conflagration it appeared that buildings west of the Hunterstown road would be consumed when a shift in the wind sent sparks, smoke and great waves of heat over that area. Sides of the big stock barn and other farm buildings steamed as firemen poured water from booster tanks.

The intense heat blistered paint and cracked a pane of glass in the door to the company office building. Tops of telephone and electric line poles near the office caught fire although they had been drenched with a chilling, light rain that was falling during the morning.

Adding to the damage to the corporation's property was the destruction of one and damage to two other Western Maryland box cars standing on a siding, loaded with fertilizer and chemicals. One was destroyed completely with its cargo while a limited amount of damage was done to the others. Biglerville firemen checked the flames on all but the first car with the use of their chemical tanks.

Freight Is Delayed

The westbound morning freight train could not pass the fire and was held up for more than an hour. Later the locomotive was detached and pulled two of the three freight cars on the siding from the scene.

The damaged cars were pushed into the local yards where their still-smoking contents were unloaded in an effort to save as much as possible of the supplies they contained. Some time later the locomotive returned and pulled the freight train into Gettysburg.

No firemen were reported injured but several were nearly overcome by the fumes of burning sulphur and other chemicals. Clarence Thompson 143 West High street, an employe at the plant, suffered minor burns about the neck when he at-

640,000 STATE MEN AWAITING DRAFT LOTTERY

Harrisburg, March 14 (AP)—Completion of serial numbering for 640,000 Pennsylvania men who registered for selective service last February 16 found the state ready and waiting today for the national draft lottery Tuesday in Washington.

State selective service officials said all arrangements have been made and predicted an orderly and rapid follow-up by local boards who must assign each man in their district his proper order number.

Colonel Benjamin Evans, state director, said registrants should not be confused by the letter "T" which they will find preceding their serial number. He explained the "T" will stand for "third registration."

The state's 422 local boards this week finished assigning each man serial numbers, beginning at T-1 and running to T-6,000 if that high a number is necessary.

Lottery on Tuesday

Starting at 6 p. m., Tuesday in the nation's capital, the 6,000 numbers will be drawn from the famed glass bowl in proceedings expected to last some 10 hours. The first drawing took 18 hours and required 9,000 numbers.

The order in which the capsuled numbers are drawn will determine the order of liability for service. Each registrant will be assigned an order number by his loal board, based on the order in which his serial number was drawn at the nation's capital.

The order numbers will run from 10,000 to 16,000 since the total order numbers drawn in the first two lotteries approximated 10,000.

General Lewis B. Hershey, national director, has authorized newspaper publication of names and order numbers in communities "as such publication will not reveal exactly the total number of registrants enrolled throughout the nation on the February registration —information which is still restricted by the War department."

HOSPITAL GETS NEW EQUIPMENT; RATES REVISED

Rate adjustments and additional dictaphone equipment for the Warner hospital were voted at the March meeting of the board of directors, Friday evening. President E. H. Markley presided with 16 directors in attendance.

The board, upon the recommendation of the medical staff and in view of the fact that "complete laboratory and X-ray equipment now is available at the hospital," authorized certain schedules of rates for complete laboratory and X-ray services at fixed fees with a limit on the maximum charge. This action was taken as a means of assisting in the making of complete case studies, the board members said.

The directors appropriated $150 for a transcribing machine and new cylinders to increase the dictaphone equipment in the surgical department. This new equipment, together with other additions donated by Drs. Bruce N. Wolff and Roy W. Gifford, now makes possible complete facilities for the making of case histories by members of the medical staff, the board announced.

February Report

The board also announced that Doctors Wolff and Gifford have presented the hospital with a skeleton, already nicknamed "Phoebe" at the hospital in spite of the fact that the skeleton once belonged to a male. The skeleton is for use in the X-ray department at the hospital.

The report of the hospital superintendent, Miss Sara J. Clark, for the busy month of February follows: Admissions, 113; patients discharged, 108; births, 27; deaths, three; number patients remaining at the end of the month, 36; average number of patients per day, 38; radiographs, 204; laboratory examinations, 513; operations, 50; accidents, 55; intravenous administrations, 17; blood transfusions, five; basal metabolisms, 11; radium treatments, eight; treatments and dressings, 76.

County Soldiers Meet In South

March 10, 1942

The Gettysburg Times,

Dear Sirs:

I have been receiving the paper regularly and enjoying it immensely. Thanks a lot. It sure helps out.

Last week-end Pvt. Clair Zimmerman and myself enjoyed a trip to Savannah, Georgia. We also had a reunion with another Adams county soldier, Sgt. John M. F. McCleaf, and his wife, who live at Beaufort, South Carolina. On the trip I met Dr. M. P. Kennedy, one of the outstanding southern colored physicians. He is a son of the late Dr. N. B. Kennedy, first negro doctor to pass a civil service examination to become a physician, and is a personal friend of Dwight Thomas, of Gettysburg.

Yours sincerely,

PVT. WILLARD C. WEIKERT,
5th Artillery Group,
Battery C.,
Paris Island, South Carolina

Courage

Moscow, March 14 (AP)—An unexploded shell two inches in diameter was removed from the side of a Red army soldier in a delicate operation unique in the history of surgery, the Tass news agency reported today.

The soldier, Nikolai Bystrikov, is recovering.

He was hit in February by a German mortar projectile which penetrated his right shoulder and buried itself in his side.

Bystrikov, realizing an explosion might occur at any moment, warned stretcher bearers away and tried twice to kill himself with a hand grenade, but was too weak to do so, Tass said.

The stretcher bearers carried him back to a crude field hospital, where Dr. M. M. Pakhman decided to operate.

The doctor ordered the staff to leave, but all insisted on staying to assist and the shell was removed without incident.

"OPEN" WINTER HELPS GAME IN ADAMS COUNTY

Wild life in Adams county came through the winter in good physical condition with an open winter and adequate feed supplies in their favor, Leo Bushman, county game protector, told members of the county Fish and Game association at their March meeting Friday evening.

He stated that there are more pheasants in Adams county now than at any time in many years. More than 300 rabbits and an equal number of pheasants were released in the county last month, he reported.

A ton of scratch feed and 3,500 pounds of corn were bought by Bushman for winter feeding of game in this county but not all of the supply was needed, the sportsmen were told.

A "good number of deer" have been seen in mountains of Adams county already this year, hunters stated Friday evening.

Place Fish in Streams

F. Mark Bream reported that on Friday 1,400 rainbow and 1,100 brook trout measuring from six to 18 inches were liberated in trout streams of the county including Birch Run and Carbaugh's Run. Other reports given later disclosed that Conewago and Middle Creeks and other approved streams also have received trout this year.

On recommendation of Vernon Corle the association voted to investigate the possibility of stocking county streams with bluegills.

Philip Sharpe, writer for national sports magazines, told the county group the stocks of new guns have been "frozen" by government order and that restrictions are expected on the sales of second hand guns. Ammunitions will be scarce, he said, and manufacture of fishing tackle has been stopped with those factories being converted to war production. There will be no more silk or nylon fishing lines, he added.

Mr. Bushman showed two reels of motion pictures he had secured from the state Game commission. One was on game refuge development and the other on hunting scenes and wild life.

It was announced a group of sportsmen in the county are circulating a petition asking for permission from the state to train dogs throughout the year on the Zinn and Bell farms near Hunterstown.

Huge Structure Is Leveled By $100,000 Blaze

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the local plant of the Central Chemical Corporation of Pennsylvania with all its machinery, hundreds of tons of fertilizers, feeds, insecticides and seeds, east of town on the Lincoln Highway. It was formerly known as the Oyler and Spangler fertilizer plant.

Discovered shortly after 6:30 o'clock the flames raced through the big two- and three-story frame building and reduced it to blazing ruins in an hour.

Visible For Miles

At the height of the fire great masses of flame billowed skyward for a hundred feet or more from almost all sections of the structure which measured about 55 by 250 feet. A huge column of smoke and sparks made the fire visible for miles around.

Estimates of the probable loss ranged from $75,000 to $100,000 and upward. Samuel G. Spangler and J. Price Oyler, managers of the plant, said they could not estimate the damage until an inspection of the ruins could be made and an inventory taken of the stocks of chemicals, fertilizers, feed and spray materials which filled the structure.

Trucker Discovers Flames

The cause of the fire remained a mystery. The flames were discovered first by Charles Sell, a trucker from Schantz's orchards, near Allentown, who had arrived early for a load of spray materials. He was dozing in his truck at the north side of the building waiting for the plant to open for the day. He was aroused by the crackling flames shooting from the roof at the northeast section of the structure.

He drove his truck to the farm house just west of the plant where he summoned L. Guy Sterner. The alarm was then telephoned to the fire company from Hartzell's service station nearby.

Gettysburg firemen responded with all of their equipment. Later firemen arrived from New Oxford and Biglerville.

Traffic Is Blocked

Gettysburg firemen laid 3,400 feet of hose to the fire from the Zinkand pond, about 500 feet north of the plant, and with the use of a Y-connection turned three big lines of water on the blaze. Smaller lines from booster tanks were used to protect buildings along the west side of the Hunterstown road.

Traffic on the Lincoln highway was blocked for an hour or more with state motor police in charge. From the outset traffic on the Hunterstown road was cut off and when the fire was over that road was blocked by debris of the west section of the destroyed building.

A large two-story frame, metal-sheeted storage shed, 50 feet to the rear of the main structure, was closely watched by firemen and was protected from the fire.

Threaten Other Buildings

At one stage of the conflagration it appeared that buildings west of the Hunterstown road would be consumed when a shift in the wind sent sparks, smoke and great waves of heat over that area. Sides of the big stock barn and other farm buildings steamed as firemen poured water from booster tanks.

The intense heat blistered paint and cracked a pane of glass in the door to the company office building. Tops of telephone and electric line poles near the office caught fire although they had been drenched with a chilling, light rain that was falling during the morning.

Adding to the damage to the corporation's property was the destruction of one and damage to two other Western Maryland box cars standing on a siding, loaded with fertilizer and chemicals. One was destroyed completely with its cargo while a limited amount of damage was done to the others. Biglerville firemen checked the flames on all but the first car with the use of their chemical tanks.

Freight Is Delayed

The westbound morning freight train could not pass the fire and was held up for more than an hour. Later the locomotive was detached and pulled two of the three freight cars on the siding from the scene.

The damaged cars were pushed into the local yards where their still-smoking contents were unloaded in an effort to save as much as possible of the supplies they contained. Some time later the locomotive returned and pulled the freight train into Gettysburg.

No firemen were reported injured but several were nearly overcome by the fumes of burning sulphur and other chemicals. Clarence Thompson, 148 West High street, an employe at the plant, suffered minor burns about the neck when he attempted to save tools from the eastern part of the building.

Muffled Explosions

Thompson and others managed to save a few bags of seeds and a dozen or more steel drums of sulphide.

As the fire raged sheets of metal that sheathed the entire structure glowed. There were muffled explosions within the inferno and great billows of flame shot upward as containers of explosive chemicals within the plant burst.

From the north section of the plant rivulets of hot liquid topped by bright blue flames coursed from the building—burning chemicals released from containers by the heat or washed out by the streams of water from the three big lines being turned on the blaze by the firemen.

Walls Collapse

As sections of the west wall collapsed and fell on the Hunterstown road quantities of dry feeds were released and poured down through the flames to the roadway. That section of the building was given over to feeds and housed a large hammer mill. Later a section of the mill toppled outward through the skeleton wall and came to rest at an angle on the smoking pile of feeds, smoldering timbers and twisted metal sheeting.

Firemen watched two big tanks along the west wall of the building. They contained lime and sulphur which plant workmen said would not explode. The tops of the tanks were open. Heavy supporting timbers caught fire several times but firemen drenched the supports to prevent the tanks from tumbling from their perch.

As sections of the building fell, burning brands dropped across hose lines and ruined several sections. Another section was damaged by the burning chemicals coursing from the rear of the structure.

Releases Stock

One of the first things that L. Guy Sterner, who lives in the tenant house near the office building, did was to liberate all the horses and cattle quartered in the barn which stood a scant 100 feet from the burning plant. It was with great difficulty that he chased the animals into an open field. Time after time some of them darted back into the stables, frightened by the huge fire nearby.

Although the last sections of wall collapsed little more than an hour after the fire was discovered, the ruins blazed throughout the morning although firemen continued to pour streams of water from three sides. Biglerville and New Oxford companies did not hook up big hose lines through their pumpers but used their chemical equipment and booster tanks.

They announced they would stand by until any danger from an underground gasoline storage tank passed. The surface pump over the tank stands directly in front of the plant, near the Hunterstown road crossing over the Western Maryland railroad tracks.

There was no estimate available from Western Maryland railroad officials on the damage to their property.

Electric current through lines leading to and nearby the plant was cut off. Heavy power cables leading from poles near the office building to the west wall of the plant pulled that section of the wall onto the roadway when that part of the plant was burned out. Both telephone and electric wires fell to the ground about the plant.

Soon after 8 o'clock M. C. Morton, president of the Central Chemical Corporation of Pennsylvania, arrived here from Hagerstown, Maryland, to inspect the damage.

The plant operated on that site for the past 25 years. It was one of three operated in this state by the corporation. The others are at Lebanon and Milton

DUTCH TROOPS CARRY ON IN ISLE OF JAVA

Melbourne, Australia, March 14 (AP)—Dutch troops still are carrying on a large scale fight against the Japanese in Java, Sumatra and the Celebes, Lieutenant Governor Hubertus J. Van Mook of the NEI declared here today.

"We are still in radio contact with Sumatra and hope to establish additional communication with Java," he said.

The Dutch resistance might continue indefinitely, the lieutenant governor said.

Van Mook said he had learned from a flier who escaped as the Japanese arrived in Bandoeng that the invaders had been delayed an entire day by the unexpectedly successful delaying tactics of Dutch troops.

Without air protection, these troops had been expected to fall quickly, he pointed out.

Jap Claims False

"Their valiant day-long struggle gave our forces in Bandoeng many additional hours in which to escape.

"Japanese claims of capturing the entire forces are false and our men are fighting in the hills now."

Bandoeng, former military headquarters of the NEI, was badly bombed last Saturday, it was said. Previously the airports and military objectives were the principal targets but the Japanese, roused by the staunch ground defense, finally turned loose a heavy attack upon the partly deserted city itself.

Van Mook, who left Bandoeng last Saturday on the last available runway strip, came here from Canberra with 14 NEI ministers and officials with whom he is seeking to marshal Dutch forces to continue the war. He said he soon would visit President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill again.

He asserted the scorched earth policy of the Indies was the most thorough of the war.

"It is impossible to estimate the value of the property destroyed but it was even more than was intended," he said. "Our engineers say the Japanese need four to six months uninterrupted by bombs to restore even the easiest oil sources"

The Mikado's invasion fleet which is massing in New Guinea waters for an attack on Australia has suffered a nasty knock from Allied bombers—at least 13 ships having been destroyed—emphasizing that the Japs are in a fair way to lose their shirts if they try to carry out the threat made yesterday by Premier Tojo to conquer all Australia unless it falls in line with "greater east Asia sphere."

United States warplanes are playing a large part in this counter-offensive, and we are rushing further aid to Australia. Indeed, the defense of this great continent will depend heavily on Uncle Sam, for while Australia has the courage and magnificent fighting men, she lacks the equipment and especially the air service upon which the conflict must turn.

Answers Query

In view of our effort there, and our other world wide commitments—in India, from which Tojo says the last vestige of British power is to be struck, in Eritrea where we are establishing a great base for co-operation with the British, and in the British Isles themselves—this seems a good spot to answer an inquiry from some of my readers.

They have written to demand, with more vigor than logic, why it is that Uncle Sam is fighting to defend the British Empire when John Bull himself is allowing it to slip away from him bit by bit. Why don't we look after our own interests and let the English look after theirs? In short, "am I my brother's keeper?"

Well, in the first place that query has a faulty premise. We aren't expending an ounce of war effort which isn't needed to safeguard our country and our homes. Looking at it from the standpoint of pure self-interest, we are busy saving our own skins. Uncle Sam and John Bull are two men in a boat on a stormy sea, and if one goes under, so does the other.

Fight for Allies

Of course, apart from the fact that we have to make war the way we are doing, whether we wish it or not, a good many of us like to feel that we are indeed fighting for John Bull and little Holland and Greece and all our other friends who have been caught in this mess. The good neighbor policy is a much happier outlook on life, especially since this world of ours has shrunk to the size of an apple, where there is no place in which we can isolate ourselves.

The front lines for our home defense lie overseas. Hitler's minions made that plain to us yesterday when Berlin bragged that the Axis has sunk 823,200 tons of shipping in American and Central American waters since we entered the war. And the Japs have pointed the thing up for us plainly enough by bombarding our California coast from a submarine.

Seek New Base

When we help our good friends the Anzacs we are creating a base which will help us defeat the Japanese, and thereby not only protect our west coast and island possessions, but compel the Nipponese to keep the door of the Orient open to our trade. We are sending technical aid to India, and the reason for that is to bolster the British and Russians by increasing India's war production, and at the same time to create a barrier which will prevent Hitler and the Mikado from consolidating their forces to overrun the whole world.

When we send troops and equipment to Europe and the middle east we certainly are helping Britain (and Russia and all the rest of our Allies). But it happens that Europe is our first line of defense against Hitler, to keep him from striking at the western hemisphere. Should he defeat Russia and Britain, he most certainly would move against us.

So there's no such easy solution of this world upheaval as just to mind our own business and let others take care of themselves. We are our brother's keeper these days, and my contacts throughout the country indicate that this is the way the vast majority of Americans want it

HITLER AGENT IS SENTENCED

Washington, March 14 (AP) — George Sylvester Viereck, German-born American citizen convicted as a propagandist for the Third Reich, today was under a federal prison sentence of two to six years.

Counsel for the poet-journalist who fell afoul the Registration Act of 1938 by failing to give complete outline of his activities on behalf of Germany, asked the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to release him on bail pending action on appeal.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday sentenced Viereck, fining him $1,500 and costs as well as sentencing him to federal prison for the limit allowed by law.

Viereck told the court he was "passionately devoted to the United States" and that he owed no allegiance to another nation. One son, George, Jr., is in the Army, he said, and another, Peter, is about to enter the service.

The convicted man's statement to the court was called a "diatribe" by Maloney, who said that whatever sentence was given "would be much less than he would receive in the country he spoke for." The prosecution had described Viereck at the trial as Hitler's ace propagandist in the United States.

BRITISH BOMB BIG BATTLESHIP

London, March 14 (AP) — The RAF bombed the 26,000-ton German battleship Gneisenau and set Naval installations on fire at the Kiel base in continuation Thursday night of the "great spring air offensive," begun last week-end.

The air ministry said today that improved flying conditions, after bad weather Wednesday, enabled a medium force of four and two-engined bombers to strike at northwestern Germany and mine German waters.

The raiders left many fires burning in the Kiel shipyards after a big attack on the German Naval base during the night, the air ministry announced Friday.

Eight bombers were lost in the night's operations, which also included attacks on other objectives in northwest Germany and mining of enemy waters, a communique said.

The loss of eight RAF planes during the latest raid on Kiel was attributed by air ministry sources to strong German anti-aircraft defenses ringing the Kiel base.

YANKS PARADE IN LONDONTOWN

London, March 14 (AP)—United States troops went on parade this morning in London for the first time since the start of the war. A small contingent marched into a park for inspection by an American colonel.

Traffic on one of London's busiest thoroughfares paused briefly while the troops passed.

English spectators noticed contrasts between the parading Americans and review of their own troops. One newspaperman remarked that it was "not a spit and Polish parade."

The Americans' shoes were clean, he said, but "there was not one highly polished pair." He added that all the men "had impressive trouser creases which would have been a credit to British guardsmen."

Another was surprised during inspection of quarters when three men, who had been on night duty, continued to sleep when the colonel passed through. One of them heard the shout of "Attention!" but only turned over.

POLITICS OUT FOR DURATION

Washington, March 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference Friday that this is a war and politics is out.

He said his remarks applied to Congress as well as the press. We read too much politics in the papers these days and these articles talk in terms of the past, he commented.

Mr. Roosevelt made that remark when asked whether he thought there could be a greater concentration of the war effort by political groups, newspapers and others.

To a question as to whether his remarks were "also true of the Cabinet," the Chief Executive responded that he found little political implications in any action taken by Cabinet members. He said that whenever he sees any such implication, and this is in pretty rare cases, he steps on it with both feet.

He was informed that Postmaster General Frank Walker had been consulting with some Pennsylvanians on Pennsylvania political matters. That, Mr. Roosevelt said, is a Pennsylvania matter, and he drew from his questioner a statement that Walker's home is at Scranton, Pa.

He drew the inference plainly that he considered it proper for a Cabinet member to interest himself in a political matter of his own state.

Repairs are being made on the barn on the Robert Weaver farm. The Weavers, who purchased the former Mrs. Ella Stallsmith farm last fall, intend to move in a few weeks.

tempted to save tools from the eastern part of the building.

Muffled Explosions

Thompson and others managed to save a few bags of seeds and a dozen or more steel drums of sulphide.

As the fire raged sheets of metal that sheathed the entire structure glowed. There were muffled explosions within the inferno and great billows of flame shot upward as containers of explosive chemicals within the plant burst.

From the north section of the plant rivulets of hot liquid topped by bright blue flames coursed from the building—burning chemicals released from containers by the heat or washed out by the streams of water from the three big lines being turned on the blaze by the firemen.

Walls Collapse

As sections of the west wall collapsed and fell on the Hunterstown road quantities of dry feeds were released and poured down through the flames to the roadway. That section of the building was given over to feeds and housed a large hammer mill. Later a section of the mill toppled outward through the skeleton wall and came to rest at an angle on the smoking pile of feeds, smoldering timbers and twisted metal sheeting.

Firemen watched two big tanks along the west wall of the building. They contained lime and sulphur which plant workmen said would not explode. The tops of the tanks were open. Heavy supporting timbers caught fire several times but firemen drenched the supports to prevent the tanks from tumbling from their perch.

As sections of the building fell, burning brands dropped across hose lines and ruined several sections. Another section was damaged by the burning chemicals coursing from the rear of the structure.

Releases Stock

One of the first things that L. Guy Sterner, who lives in the tenant house near the office building, did was to liberate all the horses and cattle quartered in the barn which stood a scant 100 feet from the burning plant. It was with great difficulty that he chased the animals into an open field. Time after time some of them darted back into the stables, frightened by the huge fire nearby.

Although the last sections of wall collapsed little more than an hour after the fire was discovered, the ruins blazed throughout the morning although firemen continued to pour streams of water from three sides. Biglerville and New Oxford companies did not hook up big hose lines through their pumpers but used their chemical equipment and booster tanks.

They announced they would stand by until any danger from an underground gasoline storage tank passed. The surface pump over the tank stands directly in front of the plant, near the Hunterstown road crossing over the Western Maryland railroad tracks.

There was no estimate available from Western Maryland railroad officials on the damage to their property.

Electric current through lines leading to and nearby the plant was cut off. Heavy power cables leading from poles near the office building to the west wall of the plant pulled that section of the wall onto the roadway when that part of the plant was burned out. Both telephone and electric wires fell to the ground about the plant.

Soon after 8 o'clock M. C. Morton, president of the Central Chemical Corporation of Pennsylvania, arrived here from Hagerstown, Maryland, to inspect the damage.

The plant operated on that site for the past 25 years. It was one of three operated in this state by the corporation. The others are at Lebanon and Milton.

Twenty to 25 persons are employed at the Gettysburg plant.

About 8:30 o'clock several milk cans filled with hot coffee for the fire fighters were taken to the scene from the Gettysburg Ice and Storage company plant.

The management announced late this morning that needs of their customers for fertilizers and insecticides will be met immediately and that within two days feed supplies will be available. Plans for rebuilding already are being considered with Monday set for a conference on future plans.

DUTCH TROOPS CARRY ON IN ISLE OF JAVA

Melbourne, Australia, March 14 (AP)—Dutch troops still are carrying on a large scale fight against the Japanese in Java, Sumatra and the Celebes, Lieutenant Governor Hubertus J. Van Mook of the NEI declared here today.

"We are still in radio contact with Sumatra and hope to establish additional communication with Java," he said.

The Dutch resistance might continue indefinitely, the lieutenant governor said.

Van Mook said he had learned from a flier who escaped as the Japanese arrived in Bandoeng that the invaders had been delayed an entire day by the unexpectedly successful delaying tactics of Dutch troops.

Without air protection, these troops had been expected to fall quickly, he pointed out.

Jap Claims False

"Their valiant day-long struggle gave our forces in Bandoeng many additional hours in which to escape.

"Japanese claims of capturing the entire forces are false and our men are fighting in the hills now."

Bandoeng, former military headquarters of the NEI, was badly bombed last Saturday, it was said. Previously the airports and military objectives were the principal targets but the Japanese, roused by the staunch ground defense, finally turned loose a heavy attack upon the partly deserted city itself.

Van Mook, who left Bandoeng last Saturday on the last available runway strip, came here from Canberra with 14 NEI ministers and officials with whom he is seeking to marshal Dutch forces to continue the war. He said he soon would visit President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill again.

He asserted the scorched earth policy of the Indies was the most thorough of the war.

"It is impossible to estimate the value of the property destroyed but it was even more than was intended," he said. "Our engineers say the Japanese need four to six months uninterrupted by bombs to restore even the easiest oil sources."

Property transfers recorded in the office of the register and recorder include the following:

HITLER AGENT IS SENTENCED

Washington, March 14 (AP) — George Sylvester Viereck, German-born American citizen convicted as a propagandist for the Third Reich, today was under a federal prison sentence of two to six years.

Counsel for the poet-journalist who fell afoul the Registration Act of 1938 by failing to give complete outline of his activities on behalf of Germany, asked the District of Columbia Court of Appeals to release him on bail pending action on appeal.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday sentenced Viereck, fining him $1,500 and costs as well as sentencing him to federal prison for the limit allowed by law.

Viereck told the court he was "passionately devoted to the United States" and that he owed no allegiance to another nation. One son, George, Jr., is in the Army, he said, and another, Peter, is about to enter the service.

The convicted man's statement to the court was called a "diatribe" by Maloney, who said that whatever sentence was given "would be much less than he would receive in the country he spoke for." The prosecution had described Viereck at the trial as Hitler's ace propagandist in the United States.

BRITISH BOMB BIG BATTLESHIP

London, March 14 (AP) — The RAF bombed the 26,000-ton German battleship Gneisenau and set Naval installations on fire at the Kiel base in continuation Thursday night of the "great spring air offensive," begun last week-end.

The air ministry said today that improved flying conditions, after bad weather Wednesday, enabled a medium force of four and two-engined bombers to strike at northwestern Germany and mine German waters.

The raiders left many fires burning in the Kiel shipyards after a big attack on the German Naval base during the night, the air ministry announced Friday.

Eight bombers were lost in the night's operations, which also included attacks on other objectives in northwest Germany and mining of enemy waters, a communique said.

The loss of eight RAF planes during the latest raid on Kiel was attributed by air ministry sources to strong German anti-aircraft defenses ringing the Kiel base.

YANKS PARADE IN LONDONTOWN

London, March 14 (AP)—United States troops went on parade this morning in London for the first time since the start of the war. A small contingent marched into a park for inspection by an American colonel.

Traffic on one of London's busiest thoroughfares paused briefly while the troops passed.

English spectators noticed contrasts between the parading Americans and review of their own troops. One newspaperman remarked that it was "not a spit and Polish parade."

The Americans' shoes were clean, he said, but "there was not one highly polished pair." He added that all the men "had impressive trouser creases which would have been a credit to British guardsmen."

Another was surprised during inspection of quarters when three men, who had been on night duty, continued to sleep when the colonel passed through. One of them heard the shout of "Attention!" but only turned over.

POLITICS OUT FOR DURATION

Washington, March 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference Friday that this is a war and politics is out.

He said his remarks applied to Congress as well as the press. We read too much politics in the papers these days and these articles talk in terms of the past, he commented.

Mr. Roosevelt made that remark when asked whether he thought there could be a greater concentration of the war effort by political groups, newspapers and others.

To a question as to whether his remarks were "also true of the Cabinet," the Chief Executive responded that he found little political implications in any action taken by Cabinet members. He said that whenever he sees any such implication, and this is in pretty rare cases, he steps on it with both feet.

He was informed that Postmaster General Frank Walker had been consulting with some Pennsylvanians on Pennsylvania political matters. That, Mr. Roosevelt said, is a Pennsylvania matter, and he drew from his questioner a statement that Walker's home is at Scranton, Pa.

He drew the inference plainly that he considered it proper for a Cabinet member to interest himself in a political matter of his own state.

Guldens

Guldens. — The harbingers of spring have arrived in the Guldens community. A robin was seen hopping around in the front yard at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Duttera, Tuesday afternoon. The pussy willows are in the height of bloom and on warm evenings during the week frogs could be heard chirping in the ponds.

Repairs are being made on the barn on the Robert Weaver farm. The Weavers, who purchased the former Mrs. Ella Stallsmith farm last fall, intend to move in a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. David McDannell and daughters, Alice and Anna, were guests during the week-end at the home of Mrs. McDannell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Kinzey, Detour, Maryland. They were accompanied home by Miss Marion Kinzey, Baltimore, who spent a few days as their guest.

Maroons Gain Second Straight District Title By Walloping Mt. Penn 37-17

Forney-men Play Great Defensive Ball To Take 23rd Victory Of Season

Make no mistake about it this time, George Forney's Gettysburg high school basketball team is again champion of District 3 of the P.I.A.A.

It all came about Friday evening when the Maroons pulverized Mt. Penn high, Berks county champions, 37-17, in a game played on the Palestra court, Harrisburg, before a crowd of approximately 1,400 fans.

After a comparatively slow first half when defense was the feature style of play of both teams, the Forney-men flashed their true championship form in the third quarter to roll up a comfortable lead which definitely put the game on "ice."

Mt. Penn, whose school board rescinded a previous ruling in order to permit the team to participate in the playoffs, would probably be glad if the ruling had not been altered. Twice in the first half the Mountaineers held two-point leads but thereafter trailed throughout and was a clearly out-classed outfit.

True Champs

While the Maroons' performance was not as smooth as in the two previous playoff games, when forced Gettysburg showed its real calibre of championship play which convinced a majority of the spectators they are true champions.

After about one minute of play Mt. Penn drew first blood when Cohan, who was outstanding for the Orange and Black, flipped in a pretty one-handed toss from near the foul line. Davey Plank tied up the score with a one-hander but the Berks countians came right back to again move ahead on a short toss by Claster. After Cohan had missed a foul Harry Bream connected for a goal from the side and then added a foul from the charity lane. From then on the Maroons were never headed.

George Fair, who has been one of the stars of the championship games, took over at that spot to tally three goals in the remaining minutes of the period. He looped a shot from beneath the hoop and then sank a sensational one-handed shot from the side. Shisslak broke away to score from beneath the hoop but Fair retaliated with a long shot from the side to give Gettysburg an 11-6 advantage at the close of the first period.

Slow Quarter

The second period was comparatively dull with each team playing a tight defensive game and consequent long stabs at the cords going wild.

Cohan scored first in the quarter on a free toss. The Mountaineers cut the Maroon lead when Captain Frasso looped a shot from midcourt. Late in the period Pooney Carter netted a long side toss and a little later Plank swished the cords on another long stab to keep Gettysburg out in front 15-9 at half time.

It was in the third period that the Maroons flashed the form that has carried them to the lofty position it now occupies. Only Carter missed breaking into the scoring column in that period as the locals began pummeling the net from all angles.

Maroons Click

Plank started the attack with a short toss and Fair was good from a side shot. After Carter missed a foul Sachs looped his first points of the evening on a long throw. Beaver's goal from the center of the floor made the score 21-11. Bream got off a quick one-handed corner shot which was followed by a goal by Frasso.

Sachs connected again on a long chuck and just before the period ended Fair converted two free tosses with Bream missing a single opportunity. The Maroons led 29-13 going into the final period.

Little scoring resulted in the last quarter with substitutions taking over in the late stages of the game.

After Plank blew a foul to open the round he made good on a close shot and when fouled netted the toss. Sachs converted the second of two free throws and then Sherman, sub forward, tossed in a long shot from along the side. Beaver missed a foul for Mt. Penn but Cohan netted a one-hander and Ammon hung up a long toss. Sachs' two fouls closed the scoring for the evening. Frazer missing a foul shortly after the Maroon reserves took over.

All Again Shine

The Maroons once again gave a good all-around exhibition with each of the regulars playing a bang-up game. Ross Sachs and Davey Plank, who are fast becoming recognized as two truly great guards, played brilliantly both on the defense and offense. George Fair, who has been one of the luminiaries in the last three games, landed 10 tallies and kept the local quintet out in front in the first half by his sensational shooting.

The other pair of Maroon starters, Pooney Carter and Harry Bream, played their usual hard, consistent game beneath the hoops. Time and again they broke up threatened rallies by the visitors.

Friday's victory marked the 23rd in 24 attempts for Gettysburg this season and places the Maroons in the inter-district playoffs for the state championship for the second successive year.

OPPOSES CURB ON CAGE RULES

Pittsburgh, March 14 (AP).—Declaring that modern, high-speed basketball is not injurious to the players, Dr. H. C. Carlson, veteran floor coach at Pitt, said today he would oppose a suggestion that the national rules be amended to slow down the game.

Carlson, former president of the National Collegiate Basketball Coaches association, will submit proof of his belief at the association's annual meeting in New Orleans next Saturday.

Elimination of the center jump, adoption of the ten-second rule, award of the ball after each basket to the team scored-upon out of bounds beyond the end line, and other innovations have made present-day basketball look like one long, mad scramble. Spectators wondered if it was too hard on the players.

The nation's coaches, deciding to find out first-hand, last year commissioned Dr. Carlson, a physician, to make an investigation. As a result he has collected data from 650 basketball teams of junior high, senior high, and freshman and varsity college teams throughout the country.

Some 950 players were put through tests and their "fatigue curves" recorded. Carlson said the tests showed the hard-running players "stop short of their normal limit."

"In other words, they let up instinctively as the game goes on and don't overtax their physical stamina," he said.

TRACK TITLE IN SCRAMBLE

State College, Pa., March 14 (AP)—The indoor IC-4A track and field championship was shoved officially just a little tighter on the brow of Pennsylvania State College today by the association's executive committee.

It ruled yesterday in New York that the Nittany Lion had every right to wear the crown despite the challenger that one of its competitors, whose second in the 1,000-yard run clinched the title, had been technically ineligible.

Norman W. Gordon, the entrant, first competed in 1936, his freshman year. After his sophomore year, he dropped out of school, returning last year. The association by-laws limit competitors to competition within five years of matriculation.

But Asa Bushnell, IC-4A secretary-treasurer, said he believed the rule-maker didn't mean to disqualify athletes under such conditions as the Gordon case disclosed. He added a recommendation to fix up the by-laws probably would be presented at the spring meeting May 28.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, March 14 (AP)—Georgia winds up spring football practice today with the "G" Day intra-squad game—complete with printed programs, the game "queen" and a dance afterward. . . . Alabama has something similar for "A" Day next week. . . . But the coaches' big problem is how many of their stars will encounter "M" (for Mobilization) Day. . . . Adding a new twist to the series of delays, postponements, etc., that have followed that Ray Robinson—Marty Servo fight, Norman Rubio, who'll sub for Servo next Friday, was due to fight Robinson last summer. Ray withdrew, claiming an injured hand, but the commission suspended him for 60 days for running out. . . . Dunc Rigney of the White Sox claims President Roosevelt lost plenty of votes by granting Ted Williams that deferment. . . . "Count the pitchers on every American league club but Boston," he says.

HEADLINES AND HEADACHES

Headline: "Army takes sock out of baseball"—that's what the pitchers have been wanting. . . . Headline: "Mildred Burke receives toughest task. Lightweight champion will give away 20 pounds"—what diet, sister? . . . Headline: "Hvam Victor in ski race"—now if his skis should form an X. . . . Headline: "Kirchmeyer and Thesz draw—but not customers."—that's nothing new in wrestling.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Pinky George, the Des Moines fight promoter, has a new job as traveling tax auditor for the Iowa Commerce commission. . . . Long Island's Roosevelt raceway probably will hold twilight trotting races during late July and August. . . . Clipper Smith's latest football find at Villanova is Ed Narcum, a freshman who is a cousin of the Wildcats' famous end, Ed Wysocki, and plays the same kind of ball. . . . Jimmy Loftus will do the publicity for the new Garden State park racetrack at Camden, N. J., and Track Superintendent Al Nun is at Hialeah taking applications for stall space. . . . Reaching Cleveland on a breezy day before the Lesnevich-Bivins fight, Joe Vella remarked: "Never heard such a wind—and I've seen the time when I had to listen to as many as 25 fight managers talkin' at once."

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Charles P. Ward, Detroit Free Press: "Lou Novikoff once confessed to a fellow player that he was 'tired' of making base hits. But that was in the minors. Lou would have paid money for a couple of base hits while he was trying to win a job with the Cubs last spring."

SERVICE DEPT.

Pvt. Con Gebbie, former sports editor of the Watertown (SD) Public Opinion and now an official war lecturer, sends this interesting note from Camp Croft (SC):

"I have found that the men easily grasp technical problems when we like the opposing armies to football teams or baseball plays. You'd be surprised to see the interest displayed by the men when we compare a pincers movement with the forward charge of the football ends, or a "defense-in-depth" plan with a 6-2-2-1 defense, or a panzer attack with a lightning sweep around left end.

"Today's Army, made up of sportswise Americans, gives up nothing when it comes to quarterbacking on the battlefield."

NOTHER NOTE

In Honor of Hermon Phillips, who originated the Butler relays back in 1933, the principal trophies at tonight's meet will be full-sized gold replicas of one of the track shoes Phillips wore when he was a quarter-miler on the 1928 Olympic team. . . . Seems Hermon must have been footloose in those days.

Emmitsburg

Emmitsburg—Notice that former First Lieutenant George Paxon has been promoted to the rank of Captain was received here recently by his wife, Mrs. Paxon, West Main street. Captain Paxon is now commander of the Regimental Headquarters Company of the 115th Infantry, 29th Division, stationed at Fort Meade.

A chimney fire occurred early Wednesday morning at the home of Allen O'Donoghue, two miles south of Emmitsburg. The fire was extinguished by the local fire company and little damage was done.

The basis for the plea for Browder's release is that it would help win the war.

PAPER HANGER TAKES LIFE

Somerset, Pa., March 14 (AP)—Despondent over his heart ailment, Otha S. Maust, 39, a paperhanger, killed himself in the garage of his Ursina home, Coroner P. S. Dosch reported last night. Maust piped carbon monoxide fumes from the exhaust of his automobile to the inside of the car, where he sat.

PENN STATE TOPS MATMEN OF COLLEGES

State College, Pa., March 14 (AP)—The jinx which has haunted University of Pennsylvania wrestling teams for 37 years made an appearance, appropriately enough, on Friday the 13th, as the quarterfinal round of the 38th Annual Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association's championship tournament was completed.

So the heavy pre-tourney favorites to win their first team title today found themselves trailing Penn State, the host college, and battling on near-even terms with Army, Navy and Princeton.

Penn State sent seven of its eight entries into the semi-finals while Penn saw three of its representatives upset. Army kept pace with Penn with five advancements while Navy and Princeton each qualified four men.

Last year's quartet of defending champions took further steps toward retaining their crowns when Carlie Ridenour of Penn State at 121 pounds, Warren Taylor of Princeton at 136, Mickey Bennett of Navy at 155, and Dick Dibattista of Penn, at 175 triumphed with ease.

Other Winners

Other favorites who gained semi-finals are Carl Sparke, undefeated Penn sophomore 121-pounder; James Laggan of Penn and Sam Harry of Penn State, unbeaten at 128; Bill Levering of Penn, and Allen Crabtree of Penn State in the 136-pound class; and Captain Glen Alexander of Penn State at 145.

Bill Carmichael, of Navy, by virtue of his win over Penn's Richard Benson, remained the standout at 165. Another midshipman to preserve an undefeated record was Shuford Swift, heavyweight.

Two semi-final bouts which may break the Penn-Penn State race for the title will come when Levering faces Crabtree at 136 and Bill Medcraft of Penn opposes State's Jack Kerns in a heavyweight encounter.

Penn State gained a slight lead in point scoring, given on basis of one point for each fall, with a total of three. Princeton, thanks to Van Sant Brewer at 121, lists two points along with Cornell, Penn and Army. Lehigh, Syracuse and Columbia each posted one point.

The finals are tonight.

LARGE CROWDS AT BALL GAMES

By GAYLE TALBOT

Tampa, Fla., March 14 (AP)—Reports from Florida:

The baseball magnates are looking more relieved with each passing day as the crowds continue to turn out about as usual to see the exhibition games. Actually there has been a drop-off of some 20 per cent in paid attendance here and at St. Petersburg, but that can be accounted for by at least a similar decrease in the tourist crop. The soldiers are turning out in droves to see the diamond stars that most of them only had read about before.

Warren Giles, vice president of the Cincinnati Reds, who train here, is inclined to optimism: "I think the big games between the leading clubs are going to draw as big crowds as ever, especially on weekends and at night," he said. "We might have some extremely bad low spots in mid-week, though, when everybody is working," he conceded.

Greenberg Happy

Sergeant Hank Greenberg is around, looking very spruce and happy in his warm-weather uniform. The former $50,000 slugger of the Detroit Tigers is only marking time impatiently until he can gain admission to a combat officers' training school, probably the one at Miami. He says he never felt better in his life, and he looks it. Not once in an hour's conversation did the big fellow from the Bronx mention big league baseball.

The biggest laugh of the spring is the Hans Lobert-Larry MacPhail feud, which arose when the doughty old manager of the Phils refused to permit the Brooklyn Dodgers to use his training field at Miami Beach. So far, every official this traveler has encountered is chuckling at Lobert's firm stand against the Dodgers' president and predicting it will add some welcome spice to the National league race.

Tennis Tourney Is Close Battle

Swarthmore, Pa., March 14 (AP)—Only a slim margin separated Swarthmore and Haverford today as the final day's play opened in the Middle Atlantic states collegiate conference tennis tournament.

The Little Quakers amassed 18 points yesterday; Haverford had 14, while defending champion Lehigh counted only two. Other entrants: Bucknell, 8 points; Johns Hopkins, Lafayette and Franklin and Marshall, 3 each; Rutgers, 1.

County Athletic Group To Meet

Robert Noll, Biglerville, president of the Adams County Scholastic Athletic association, has called a league meeting to be held Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock in the office of the county superintendent at the court house.

A decision will be reached as to whether the baseball league will function this spring. The basketball schedule for next year will be drawn up.

Representatives will be present from Fairfield, East Berlin, New Oxford, Biglerville, Littlestown, Arendtsville and York Springs.

RADIO PROGRAMS

The American Legion will celebrate its twenty-third birthday, March 15, 16 and 17. There will be a half hour broadcast over the Red Network of the National Broadcasting Company, Sunday from 1:30 to 2 p. m., Eastern War Time.

The show is being produced, cast, and emceed by Rudy Vallee. He, with his supporting cast, will be heard from the NBC studios in Hollywood. National Commander Lynn U. Stambaugh will speak briefly from the Chicago studios and National Auxiliary President Mrs. Mark W. Murrill will be heard from NBC's New York studios.

NINE DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIPS ARE DETERMINED

(By The Associated Press)

Nine of 12 district champions have been decided in the annual PIAA eliminations leading to the state basketball title and a tenth will be determined tonight.

Somerset was the first champion crowned, winning district five on Tuesday. Then Pittsburgh Westinghouse chaptured district eight on Thursday. Last (Friday) night Lower Merion, Gettysburg, Shamokin, Franklin Borough, Bradford, Sharon and Clarks Summit all chalked up district championships.

Coraopolis and Arnold battle tonight for district seven laurels at Pittsburgh. Leaving only districts two and eleven to be decided next week as the inter-district playoffs get under way.

Paced by Lower Merion, defending state champion, most of last night's district winners romped home in easy fashion. The Ardmore Aces walloped Yeadon, 39 to 25, for their 30th victory in 31 starts.

Likewise Gettysburg walloped Mt. Penn; 37-17; Shamokin humbled Sayre 29-17; Franklin Borough socked Lock Haven, 41-19; Bradford smothered Dubois, 70-30; Sharon beat Erie East, 39-28, and Clark's Summit defeated Waverly, 26-21.

Catasauqua surprised by beating Mahanoy City, 49-45, in a semi-final struggle in district eleven as Pottsville trounced Port Carbon, 56-26. Berwick had an easy time in district two, bowling over Dunmore, 41-11.

Friday's Results

District One final: Lower Merion 39, Yeadon 25.

District Two quarter-final: Berwick 41, Dunmore 11.

District Three final: Gettysburg 37, Mt. Penn 17.

District Four final: Shamokin 29, Sayre 17.

District Six final: Franklin Borough 41, Lock Haven 19.

District Nine final: Bradford 70, Dubois 30.

District Ten final: Sharon 39, Erie East 28.

District 11 semi-finals: Catasauqua 49, Mahanoy City 45; Pottsville 56, Port Carbon 26.

District 12 final: Clark's Summit 26, Waverly 21.

Tonight's Schedule

District Seven final: Coraopolis vs. Arnold at Pittsburgh.

District Two semi-final: Carbondale vs. Swoyerville.

BYRD ATTACKS PLAY IN WAR

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Senator Byrd (D-Va), saying he had been informed of plans to name 610 regional and district coordinators who would direct such activities as badminton, archery and paddleball, told the Senate yesterday:

"In this time of war and great peril, it seems to me we need less of badminton, billiards and similar activities so we may devote our total and undivided effort to winning the war."

He charged that the office of civilian defense was contemplating "a gigantic plan for regimentation for physical fitness and recreation as a part of the national defense program."

The program to appoint the 610 aides was given him by John B. Kelly, Philadelphia, national coordinator of physical fitness for the OCD, Byrd added.

Byrd made public a list of national coordinators of various sports and activities from Ellwood A. Geiges, administrative executive of the OCD. Among them were:

Badminton—Miss Elizabeth Gilreath, Wilson college, Chambersburg, Pa.

Weight lifting—Robert Hoffman, 51 N. Broad street, York, Pa.

The highest weather temperature ever recorded was 136 degrees Fahrenheit at Azizia, Libya, September 13, 1922.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 14 (AP)—Lloyd Mangrum, the Chicago professional, hit the jack-pot in a Friday-the-thirteenth double-decker, winning the $400 first prize in the victory golf tournament here and then teaming up with polo'st Michael G. Phipps to take the pro-amateur event.

Having tucked in yesterday's main event, with a 36-hole total of 137, Mangrum paired with Phipps and sliced an even dozen strokes off par to card a best-ball record 62, the performance netting Mangrum $1,000 more.

Four strokes behind them came Charles V. McAdam of Greenwich, Conn., and Lawson Little of San Francisco and James W. Paul of Philadelphia and Herman Keiser of Akron, O.

In the medal playing, Little was a stroke behind Mangrum with a 139, followed by Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., with 140. Then came Henry Picard of Oklahoma City with 141.

Other leading money winners were Little, $587.50, Keiser, $287.50, Picard, $170 and Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., $156.

MILERS MEET THIS EVENING

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, March 14 (AP)—Metropolitan track fans have hurried to the box office with almost the same speed they expect Leslie MacMitchell and Gil Dodds to show tonight in their Columbian mile duel.

Not since Wednesday has there been a ticket unsold for any of the reserved seats in huge Madison Square Garden.

Two weeks ago Dodd ruined a neck and neck thriller between the two by scampering through his third quarter in 61 seconds and building up a 15-yard lead. MacMitchell couldn't get all the distance back and lost for the first time in 19 starts. The time was 4:08.7.

That immediately set up tonight's race, feature event of the twenty-third annual Knights of Columbus games.

Dodds' victory was his first appearance of the season as a miler and since then the Boston Divinity student has pounded through a 4:15.7 mile on an unbanked oval at Washington without spikes while MacMitchell took the IC-4A title in 4:13.7.

There will be two other starters, Jim Rafferty, once of Fordham and Gene Venzke of the New York A.C.

Maroons Gain Second Straight District Title By Walloping Mt. Penn 37-17

Forney-men Play Great Defensive Ball To Take 23rd Victory Of Season

Make no mistake about it this time, George Forney's Gettysburg high school basketball team is again champion of District 3 of the P.I.A.A.

It all came about Friday evening when the Maroons pulverized Mt. Penn high, Berks county champions, 37-17, in a game played on the Palestra court, Harrisburg, before a crowd of approximately 1,400 fans.

After a comparatively slow first half when defense was the feature style of play of both teams, the Forney-men flashed their true championship form in the third quarter to roll up a comfortable lead which definitely put the game on "ice."

Mt. Penn, whose school board rescinded a previous ruling in order to permit the team to participate in the playoffs, would probably be glad if the ruling had not been altered. Twice in the first half the Mountaineers held two-point leads but thereafter trailed throughout and was a clearly out-classed outfit.

True Champs

While the Maroons' performance was not as smooth as in the two previous playoff games, when forced Gettysburg showed its real calibre of championship play which convinced a majority of the spectators they are true champions.

After about one minute of play Mt. Penn drew first blood when Cohan, who was outstanding for the Orange and Black, flipped in a pretty one-handed toss from near the foul line. Davey Plank tied up the score with a one-hander but the Berks countians came right back to again move ahead on a short toss by Claster. After Cohan had missed a foul Harry Bream connected for a goal from the side and then added a foul from the charity lane. From then on the Maroons were never headed.

George Fair, who has been one of the stars of the championship games, took over at that spot to tally three goals in the remaining minutes of the period. He looped a shot from beneath the hoop and then sank a sensational one-handed shot from the side. Shisslak broke away to score from beneath the hoop but Fair retaliated with a long shot from the side to give Gettysburg an 11-6 advantage at the close of the first period.

Slow Quarter

The second period was comparatively dull with each team playing a tight defensive game and consequent long stabs at the cords going wild.

Cohan scored first in the quarter on a free toss. The Mountaineers cut the Maroon lead when Captain Frasso looped a shot from midcourt. Late in the period Pooney Carter netted a long side toss and a little later Plank swished the cords on another long stab to keep Gettysburg out in front 15-9 at half time.

It was in the third period that the Maroons flashed the form that has carried them to the lofty position it now occupies. Only Carter missed breaking into the scoring column in that period as the locals began pummeling the net from all angles.

Maroons Click

Plank started the attack with a short toss and Fair was good from a side shot. After Carter missed a foul Sachs looped his first points of the evening on a long throw. Beaver's goal from the center of the floor made the score 21-11. Bream got off a quick one-handed corner shot which was followed by a goal by Frasso.

Sachs connected again on a long chuck and just before the period ended Fair converted two free tosses with Bream missing a single opportunity. The Maroons led 29-13 going into the final period.

Little scoring resulted in the last quarter with substitutions taking over in the late stages of the game.

After Plank blew a foul to open the round he made good on a close shot and when fouled netted the toss. Sachs converted the second of two free throws and then Sherman, sub forward, tossed in a long shot from along the side. Beaver missed a foul for Mt. Penn but Cohan netted a one-hander and Ammon hung up a long toss. Sachs' two fouls closed the scoring for the evening, Frazer missing a foul shortly after the Maroon reserves took over.

All Again Shine

The Maroons once again gave a good all-around exhibition with each of the regulars playing a bang-up game. Ross Sachs and Davey Plank, who are fast becoming recognized as two truly great guards, played brilliantly both on the defense and offense. George Fair, who has been one of the luminiaries in the last three games, landed 10 tallies and kept the local quintet out in front in the first half by his sensational shooting.

The other pair of Maroon starters, Pooney Carter and Harry Bream, played their usual hard, consistent game beneath the hoops. Time and again they broke up threatened rallies by the visitors.

Friday's victory marked the 23rd in 24 attempts for Gettysburg this season and places the Maroons in the inter-district playoffs for the state championship for the second successive year.

OPPOSES CURB ON CAGE RULES

Pittsburgh, March 14 (AP).—Declaring that modern, high-speed basketball is not injurious to the players, Dr. H. C. Carlson, veteran floor coach at Pitt, said today he would oppose a suggestion that the national rules be amended to slow down the game.

Carlson, former president of the National Collegiate Basketball Coaches association, will submit proof of his belief at the association's annual meeting in New Orleans next Saturday.

Elimination of the center jump, adoption of the ten-second rule, award of the ball after each basket to the team scored-upon out of bounds beyond the end line, and other innovations have made present-day basketball look like one long, mad scramble. Spectators wondered if it was too hard on the players.

The nation's coaches, deciding to find out first-hand, last year commissioned Dr. Carlson, a physician, to make an investigation. As a result he has collected data from 650 basketball teams of junior high, senior high, and freshman and varsity college teams throughout the country.

Some 950 players were put through tests and their "fatigue curves" recorded. Carlson said the tests showed the hard-running players "stop short of their normal limit."

"In other words, they let up instinctively as the game goes on and don't overtax their physical stamina," he said.

TRACK TITLE IN SCRAMBLE

State College, Pa., March 14 (AP) —The indoor IC-4A track and field championship was shoved officially just a little tighter on the brow of Pennsylvania State College today by the association's executive committee.

It ruled yesterday in New York that the Nittany Lion had every right to wear the crown despite the challenger that one of its competitors, whose second in the 1,000-yard run clinched the title, had been technically ineligible.

Norman W. Gordon, the entrant, first competed in 1936, his freshman year. After his sophomore year, he dropped out of school, returning last year. The association by-laws limit competitors to competition within five years of matriculation.

But Asa Bushnell, IC-4A secretary-treasurer, said he believed the rule-maker didn't mean to disqualify athletes under such conditions as the Gordon case disclosed. He added a recommendation to fix up the by-laws probably would be presented at the spring meeting May 28.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, March 14 (AP)—Georgia winds up spring football practice today with the "G" Day intra-squad game—complete with printed programs, the game "queen" and a dance afterward. . . . Alabama has something similar for "A" Day next week. . . . But the coaches' big problem is how many of their stars will encounter "M" (for Mobilization) Day. . . . Adding a new twist to the series of delays, postponements, etc., that have followed that Ray Robinson—Marty Servo fight, Norman Rubio, who'll sub for Servo next Friday, was due to fight Robinson last summer. Ray withdrew, claiming an injured hand, but the commission suspended him for 60 days for running out. . . . Dunc Rigney of the White Sox claims President Roosevelt lost plenty of votes by granting Ted Williams that deferment. . . . "Count the pitchers on every American league club but Boston," he says.

HEADLINES AND HEADACHES

Headline: "Army takes sock out of baseball"—that's what the pitchers have been wanting. . . . Headline: "Mildred Burke receives toughest task. Lightweight champion will give away 20 pounds"—what diet, sister? . . . Headline: "Hvam Victor in ski race"—now if his skis should form an X. . . . Headline: "Kirchmeyer and Thesz draw—but not customers."—that's nothing new in wrestling.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Pinky George, the Des Moines fight promoter, has a new job as traveling tax auditor for the Iowa Commerce commission. . . . Long Island's Roosevelt raceway probably will hold twilight trotting races during late July and August. . . . Clipper Smith's latest football find at Villanova is Ed Narcum, a freshman who is a cousin of the Wildcats' famous end, Ed Wysocki, and plays the same kind of ball. . . . Jimmy Loftus will do the publicity for the new Garden State park racetrack at Camden, N. J., and Track Superintendent Al Nun is at Hialeah taking applications for stall space. . . . Reaching Cleveland on a breezy day before the Lesnevich-Bivins fight, Joe Vella remarked: "Never heard such a wind—and I've seen the time when I had to listen to as many as 25 fight managers talkin' at once."

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Charles P. Ward, Detroit Free Press: "Lou Novikoff once confessed to a fellow player that he was 'tired' of making base hits. But that was in the minors. Lou would have paid money for a couple of base hits while he was trying to win a job with the Cubs last spring."

SERVICE DEPT.

Pvt. Con Gebbie, former sports editor of the Watertown (SD) Public Opinion and now an official war lecturer, sends this interesting note from Camp Croft (SC):

"I have found that the men easily grasp technical problems when we like the opposing armies to football teams or baseball plays. You'd be surprised to see the interest displayed by the men when we compare a pincers movement with the forward charge of the football ends, or a "defense-in-depth" plan with a 6-2-2-1 defense, or a panzer attack with a lightning sweep around left end.

"Today's Army, made up of sportswise Americans, gives up nothing when it comes to quarterbacking on the battlefield."

'NOTHER NOTE

In Honor of Hermon Phillips, who originated the Butler relays back in 1933, the principal trophies at tonight's meet will be full-sized gold replicas of one of the track shoes Phillips wore when he was a quarter-miler on the 1928 Olympic team. . . . Seems Hermon must have been footloose in those days.

Emmitsburg

Emmitsburg—Notice that former First Lieutenant George Paxon has been promoted to the rank of Captain was received here recently by his wife, Mrs. Paxon, West Main street. Captain Paxon is now commander of the Regimental Headquarters Company of the 115th Infantry, 29th Division, stationed at Fort Meade.

A chimney fire occurred early Wednesday morning at the home of Allen O'Donoghue, two miles south of Emmitsburg. The fire was extinguished by the local fire company and little damage was done.

Elias Luther church services—Sunday School at 9:30 a. m. with W. O. Shank, Blue Ridge Summit, guest teacher of the Brotherhood Bible class; worship with sermon, "America's Four Freedoms," at 10:45 a. m.; Lenten vespers at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday. Lenten service at 7:45 p. m. Friday, catechise at 7:30 p. m.

Shortage of coal and gas caused a recent partial shut-down of industrial operations in France.

MEET SUNDAY ON PLAYOFF

Gettysburg high District 3 champions, and Lower Merion, titlists of District 1 and last year's state basketball champions, will clash in the first of the series of inter-district games next Tuesday evening.

A meeting will be held in Lancaster Sunday afternoon to determine the site of the game.

Representatives of Gettysburg and Lower Merion high schools, and committee members of both districts will attend the meeting.

Lower Merion clinched the District 1 honors Friday evening by crushing Yeadon 39-25 at the Penn Palestra in Philadelphia.

Next Saturday night the winner of the Gettysburg-Lower Merion tilt will meet the victor of the game between Pottsville and Catasaqua which will be played Tuesday for the District 11 title.

More than 150 union labor leaders have signed a petition and caused it to be published in metropolitan dailies urging the release from prison of Earl Browder, foremost communist of the U. The basis for the plea for Browder's release is that it would help win the war.

Here's the answer to that old squawk about farmers being worried and concerned over Daylight Saving Time or War Time now in effect:

Sheriff Charles T. Frock asked a mountaineer-farmer whether the new war time would cause any inconvenience during the spring plowing. Frock is still chuckling over the answer.

"We don't pay much attention to clocks, Charley," the mountaineer replied, after expelling a big chaw of tobacco. "We just work from 'kin (can) see' to 'can't see.'"

So far 21 plots have been reserved and about 25 or 30 plots are open to those who care to get a little spare-time exercise.

PAPER HANGER TAKES LIFE

Somerset, Pa., March 14 (AP)—Despondent over his heart ailment, Otha S. Maust, 39, a paperhanger, killed himself in the garage of his Ursina home, Coroner P. S. Dosch reported last night. Maust piped carbon monoxide fumes from the exhaust of his automobile to the inside of the car, where he sat.

PENN STATE TOPS MATMEN OF COLLEGES

State College, Pa., March 14 (AP) —The jinx which has haunted University of Pennsylvania wrestling teams for 37 years made an appearance, appropriately enough, on Friday the 13th, as the quarterfinal round of the 38th Annual Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association's championship tournament was completed.

So the heavy pre-tourney favorites to win their first team title today found themselves trailing Penn State, the host college, and battling on near-even terms with Army, Navy and Princeton.

Penn State sent seven of its eight entries into the semi-finals while Penn saw three of its representatives upset. Army kept pace with Penn with five advancements while Navy and Princeton each qualified four men.

Last year's quartet of defending champions took further steps toward retaining their crowns when Carlie Ridenour of Penn State at 121 pounds, Warren Taylor of Princeton at 136, Mickey Bennett of Navy at 155, and Dick Dibattista of Penn, at 175 triumphed with ease.

Other Winners

Other favorites who gained semi-finals are Carl Sparke, undefeated Penn sophomore 121-pounder; James Laggan of Penn and Sam Harry of Penn State, unbeaten at 128; Bill Levering of Penn, and Allen Crabtree of Penn State in the 136-pound class; and Captain Glen Alexander of Penn State at 145.

Bill Carmichael, of Navy, by virtue of his win over Penn's Richard Benson, remained the standout at 165. Another midshipman to preserve an undefeated record was Shuford Swift, heavyweight.

Two semi-final bouts which may break the Penn-Penn State race for the title will come when Levering faces Crabtree at 136 and Bill Medcraft of Penn opposes State's Jack Kerns in a heavyweight encounter.

Penn State gained a slight lead in point scoring, given on basis of one point for each fall, with a total of three. Princeton, thanks to Van Sant Brewer at 121, lists two points along with Cornell, Penn and Army. Lehigh, Syracuse and Columbia each posted one point.

The finals are tonight.

LARGE CROWDS AT BALL GAMES

By GAYLE TALBOT

Tampa, Fla., March 14 (AP)—Reports from Florida:

The baseball magnates are looking more relieved with each passing day as the crowds continue to turn out about as usual to see the exhibition games. Actually there has been a drop-off of some 20 per cent in paid attendance here and at St. Petersburg, but that can be accounted for by at least a similar decrease in the tourist crop. The soldiers are turning out in droves to see the diamond stars that most of them only had read about before.

Warren Giles, vice president of the Cincinnati Reds, who train here, is inclined to optimism: "I think the big games between the leading clubs are going to draw as big crowds as ever, especially on weekends and at night," he said. "We might have some extremely bad low spots in mid-week, though, when everybody is working," he conceded.

Greenberg Happy

Sergeant Hank Greenberg is around, looking very spruce and happy in his warm-weather uniform. The former $50,000 slugger of the Detroit Tigers is only marking time impatiently until he can gain admission to a combat officers' training school, probably the one at Miami. He says he never felt better in his life, and he looks it. Not once in an hour's conversation did the big fellow from the Bronx mention big league baseball.

The biggest laugh of the spring is the Hans Lobert-Larry MacPhail feud, which arose when the doughty old manager of the Phils refused to permit the Brooklyn Dodgers to use his training field at Miami Beach. So far, every official this traveler has encountered is chuckling at Lobert's firm stand against the Dodgers' president and predicting it will add some welcome spice to the National league race.

Tennis Tourney Is Close Battle

Swarthmore, Pa., March 14 (AP) —Only a slim margin separated Swarthmore and Haverford today as the final day's play opened in the Middle Atlantic states collegiate conference tennis tournament.

The Little Quakers amassed 18 points yesterday; Haverford had 14, while defending champion Lehigh counted only two. Other entrants: Bucknell, 8 points; Johns Hopkins, Lafayette and Franklin and Marshall, 3 each; Rutgers, 1.

County Athletic Group To Meet

Robert Noll, Biglerville, president of the Adams County Scholastic Athletic association, has called a league meeting to be held Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock in the office of the county superintendent at the court house.

A decision will be reached as to whether the baseball league will function this spring. The basketball schedule for next year will be drawn up.

Representatives will be present from Fairfield, East Berlin, New Oxford, Biglerville, Littlestown, Arendtsville and York Springs.

RADIO PROGRAMS

The American Legion will celebrate its twenty-third birthday, March 15, 16 and 17. There will be a half hour broadcast over the Red Network of the National Broadcasting Company, Sunday from 1:30 to 2 p. m., Eastern War Time.

The show is being produced, cast, and emceed by Rudy Vallee. He, with his supporting cast, will be heard from the NBC studios in Hollywood. National Commander Lynn U. Stambaugh will speak briefly from the Chicago studios and National Auxiliary President Mrs. Mark W. Murrill will be heard from NBC's New York studios.

NINE DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIPS ARE DETERMINED

(By The Associated Press)

Nine of 12 district champions have been decided in the annual PIAA eliminations leading to the state basketball title and a tenth will be determined tonight.

Somerset was the first champion crowned, winning district five on Tuesday. Then Pittsburgh Westinghouse chaptured district eight on Thursday. Last (Friday) night Lower Merion, Gettysburg, Shamokin, Franklin Borough, Bradford, Sharon and Clarks Summit all chalked up district championships.

Coraopolis and Arnold battle tonight for district seven laurels at Pittsburgh. Leaving only districts two and eleven to be decided next week as the inter-district playoffs get under way.

Paced by Lower Merion, defending state champion, most of last night's district winners romped home in easy fashion. The Ardmore Aces walloped Yeadon, 39 to 25, for their 30th victory in 31 starts.

Likewise Gettysburg walloped Mt. Penn; 37-17; Shamokin humbled Sayre 29-17; Franklin Borough socked Lock Haven, 41-19; Bradford smothered Dubois, 70-30; Sharon beat Erie East, 39-28, and Clark's Summit defeated Waverly, 26-21.

Catasauqua surprised by beating Mahanoy City, 49-45, in a semi-final struggle in district eleven as Pottsville trounced Port Carbon, 56-26. Berwick had an easy time in district two, bowling over Dunmore, 41-11.

Friday's Results

District One final: Lower Merion 39, Yeadon 25.

District Two quarter-final: Berwick 41, Dunmore 11.

District Three final: Gettysburg 37, Mt. Penn 17.

District Four final: Shamokin 29, Sayre 17.

District Six final: Franklin Borough 41, Lock Haven 19.

District Nine final: Bradford 70, Dubois 30.

District Ten final: Sharon 39, Erie East 28.

District 11 semi-finals: Catasauqua 49, Mahanoy City 45; Pottsville 56, Port Carbon 26.

District 12 final: Clark's Summit 26, Waverly 21.

Tonight's Schedule

District Seven final: Coraopolis vs. Arnold at Pittsburgh.

District Two semi-final: Carbondale vs. Swoyerville.

BYRD ATTACKS PLAY IN WAR

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Senator Byrd (D-Va), saying he had been informed of plans to name 610 regional and district coordinators who would direct such activities as badminton, archery and paddleball, told the Senate yesterday:

"In this time of war and great peril, it seems to me we need less of badminton, billiards and similar activities so we may devote our total and undivided effort to winning the war."

He charged that the office of civilian defense was contemplating "a gigantic plan for regimentation for physical fitness and recreation as a part of the national defense program."

The program to appoint the 610 aides was given him by John B. Kelly, Philadelphia, national coordinator of physical fitness for the OCD, Byrd added.

Byrd made public a list of national coordinators of various sports and activities from Ellwood A. Geiges, administrative executive of the OCD. Among them were:

Badminton—Miss Elizabeth Gilreath, Wilson college, Chambersburg, Pa.

Weight lifting—Robert Hoffman, 51 N. Broad street, York, Pa.

The highest weather temperature ever recorded was 136 degrees Fahrenheit at Azizia, Libya, September 13, 1922.

Friday, 13th, No Jinx To Mangrum

Palm Beach, Fla., March 14 (AP) —Lloyd Mangrum, the Chicago professional, hit the jack-pot in a Friday-the-thirteenth double-decker, winning the $400 first prize in the victory golf tournament here and then teaming up with polo ist Michael G. Phipps to take the pro-amateur event.

Having tucked in yesterday's main event, with a 36-hole total of 137, Mangrum paired with Phipps and sliced an even dozen strokes off par to card a best-ball record 62, the performance netting Mangrum $1,000 more.

Four strokes behind them came Charles V. McAdam of Greenwich, Conn., and Lawson Little of San Francisco and James W. Paul of Philadelphia and Herman Keiser of Akron, O.

In the medal playing, Little was a stroke behind Mangrum with a 139, followed by Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., with 140. Then came Henry Picard of Oklahoma City with 141.

Other leading money winners were Little, $587.50, Keiser, $287.50, Picard, $170 and Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., $156.

MILERS MEET THIS EVENING

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, March 14 (AP)—Metropolitan track fans have hurried to the box office with almost the same speed they expect Leslie MacMitchell and Gil Dodds to show tonight in their Columbian mile duel.

Not since Wednesday has there been a ticket unsold for any of the reserved seats in huge Madison Square Garden.

Two weeks ago Dodd ruined a neck and neck thriller between the two by scampering through his third quarter in 61 seconds and building up a 15-yard lead. MacMitchell couldn't get all the distance back and lost for the first time in 19 starts. The time was 4:08.7

That immediately set up tonight's race, feature event of the twenty-third annual Knights of Columbus games.

Dodds' victory was his first appearance of the season as a miler and since then the Boston Divinity student has pounded through a 4:15.7 mile on an unbanked oval at Washington without spikes while MacMitchell took the IC-4A title in 4:13.7.

There will be two other starters, Jim Rafferty, once of Fordham and Gene Venzke of the New York A.C.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

REASON

How few people reason things out. It is so much easier to take some one else's opinion, or to stick to an opinion already decided upon, regardless of fact or truth.

Everyone has a right to think as he pleases, but all thought should be guided by reason. All truth is built from basic principles, and if these are neglected, or carelessly shoved aside, there is little basis at all for constructive talk.

How delightful it is to talk with one whose mind is always open to reason, and who welcomes all possible light to be shed upon doubtful opinions. There is always something to be gained from contact with another mind, and most, of course, where that mind keeps nothing back, but freely expresses itself that it, too, may gain and learn.

Once you form the habit of reasoning things out you will be amazed how efficient you become at times when you have to act fast—and accurately.

Better to remain silent than enter into a conversation in which you are ill prepared to furnish intelligent opinions. On the other hand, if you have become practiced in reasoning things out under all circumstances, you will be that much better prepared to enter any talk at any time, and acquit yourself well and honorably.

Bitterness alone results from talk with those who will not reason—who are opinionated and will not listen to fair statements. Time thus spent is futile and wasted, and the thrill of conversation and intellectual nourishment is taken from you.

How many difficult problems could be quickly worked out if people would but get together and reason out all the related facts. All big problems are actually much more simple than they seem or appear. The obvious thing, when confronted with an unexpected task, is to reason out the best possible solution.

You always get right back where you started with a person if he refuses to reason. And no one gets anywhere!

THE BRAVE

A few brave minutes mark the man
And cowards all betray.
The strong fight back as best they can.
The weaklings run away.

The bold give battle blow for blow
Nor flinch from blows they take.
Enough it is for them to know
They fight for freedom's sake.

But if they fall, they know shall rise
Another force ere long
To battle land and sea and skies,
Stronger than they were strong.

They never doubt their cause is just
Nor ever think to flee;
The brave are sure, with time, they must
Be given victory.

88,754 Wrecked Cars In State's 1,223 Auto Graveyards

ENOUGH METAL TO BUILD TEN BATTLESHIPS

Harrisburg, March 14 (AP)—A state-wide survey today disclosed 1,223 scrap yards in Pennsylvania containing 88,754 wrecked automobiles and trucks—enough metal to build 10 battleships of 35,000 tons each.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Works Projects Administration made the survey in an effort to speed the flow of scrap to hungry steel mills. A salvage drive is being conducted by the state Defense Council.

The 551 urban junkyards included in the WPA check showed 51,016 wrecked vehicles while the Department of Agriculture located 37,738 cars and trucks in 677 rural graveyards. Officials estimated each averaged a ton of metal.

Philadelphia topped the list of counties with 116 graveyards containing 7,633 vehicles. Allegheny was next with 91 and 6,900 respectively with Northampton third at 15 and 6,405. Beaver, Lancaster and Washington had slightly more than 3,000 vehicles.

There were no graveyards in Fulton county while Forest had five with five vehicles.

Need Scrap Metal

Announcing results of the survey, Chairman James E. Walker of the agriculture department's state War Board said that during recent months furnaces having an annual capacity of several million tons had been forced to shut down solely due to lack of iron and steel scrap. He said the iron and steel scrap shortage for 1942 was estimated at a minimum of six million tons.

While declaring operators of scrap yards would be offered a fair price for their material, Walker added that "in cases where fair offers are rejected, government investigation will follow and the power of requisition may be invoked."

He asked state War Boards to provide names and addresses of any junkyards withholding scrap and also of dealers paying prices "substantially below the local price levels calculated from a price map."

AGED FIRE CHIEF DIES

Erie, Pa., March 14 (AP)—Michael P. Leonard, 87, who rose from the rank of a "Minute Man" back in the 80's to become fire chief in 1928, died yesterday. He was a fireman for more than a half-century. Despite his advanced age he was active as chief until a few weeks ago. Surviving are a son, Raymond, and a daughter. Miss Marian Leonard.

Flashes of Life

WINDFALL

Newport News, Va. (AP)—After paying some bills, William Greer wound up $4 short.

He asked two stores to check their cash receipts for the day to find out whether they were $4 ahead.

One store called Greer later and said: "Our cash balance is $4 over. We are mailing you a check."

Then the other store called. The mystified Greer was told: "Our cash balance is $4 over. We are mailing you a check."

HO-HUM

Kansas City (AP)—Uncle Sam had better pick up Kansas City's 46 tons of scrap steel before it shrinks to a rivet.

Assistant City Engineer Ray Blessing has been trying since last December to obtain permission from the Office of Production Management to sell the street viaduct salvage.

Meanwhile, thieves have stolen one ton of the metal.

TAXING POETS TOO?

Albuquerque, N. M. (AP)—The internal revenue collector is finding new evidence of the broad scope of this year's income tax law—poets are paying too.

"Come little ten-spot, shoulder arms; we'll prove the Japs are false alarms," read a note attached to one report.

Another, pinned to a $5 bill: "Here's a fin—to help us win."

PIKERS!

Spokane, Wash. (AP)—Pvt. Carl Schroegel has 13 letters in his name, has been in the Army a month and 13 days and was married 13 days after enlisting. He got a 13 word telegram from his bride on Friday the 13th, asking him to meet her in Seattle.

But the Army gave him just 12 hours leave.

Irvin Confirmed As State WPA Chief

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Senate confirmation gave Pennsylvania a new WPA administrator today. He is Richard Irvin, Pittsburgh architect and engineer whom President Roosevelt nominated for the post.

Irvin helped organize the original WPA set-up in the state and has been associated with various private and public building projects for many years.

He succeeds Col. Philip Mathews, who resigned several months ago. An acting administrator took over during the interim. The post pays $8,000 a year.

Backgrounds of Adams County

No. 232—Odds And Ends Of "Low Dutch History"

B. F. MacPHERSON

Among the notes on the history of the Low Dutch Settlement in Adams County are a great many miscellaneous notes of unusual interest. These are given here exactly as taken from the original record.

"Among the first of the Jersey colonists to locate in York county (now Adams) was James Petit, whose ancestor was one of the early Huguenot refugees to New Jersey As early as 1740 this James possessed a considerable estate in the Conewago. He died in 1771 at an advanced age. Abram La Rue, who died in 1757, and Abram de Gomois, both Huguenot pioneers from New Jersey, were also among the early settlers.

"David Demaree (Demorest) was born in 1731 and died in 1808. He was a descendant of a Hugenot refugee of the same name, born in Beauchamp, France, in 1620, who came to New York State in 1663 because of religious persecution.

Dutch Colonist

"Frederick Banta was the grandson of Professor Epke Banta, a Dutch colonist who died at Schrallenberg in 1719

"John Bodine, who died at Conewago in 1776, at a very advanced age, was the grandson of a Huguenot refugee, one Jean Bodine, who died on Long Island, New York, in 1695.

"George Brocaw who died in 1794, was a descendant of Pierre Brocaw, a French refugee who settled in New York prior to 1680. Andre Rickett died in 1776; Michael Le Boob died in 1781; Adam de Corsine died in 1779; Cornelius Corsine died in 1786. He was a soldier of the Revolution. Peter Cosine died in 1779. He was probably a son of the Cornelius mentioned above. Peter Montfort, the progenitor of a noble family, died at an advanced age in 1769

Magdelena Brokaw whose father and brothers fought in the Revolution, had her thumbs ground in British gunlocks because she refused to give information concerning her relatives. At that time she was only sixteen years of age.

Old Peter Scalped

"Old Peter Van Arsdale was scalped in his own clearing and a Banta was taken prisoner and carried into the wilderness."

These scraps of information were taken from letters and notes of the Rev. David Demarest whose history of the Low Dutch Settlement was one of the earliest, if not the first, to be written. Historians consider them of great interest and for that reason they are presented in this column.

The Peter Cosine who is mentioned above as having died in 1779 is quite probably buried in an unmarked grave in the Low Dutch Graveyard. His will is to be found in the York County Courthouse in Will Book "E," page 37. In this testament, which was written June 29, 1779 and entered to probate October 26, 1779, he mentions the following members of his family:

1. Wife—Williampe (?) Cosine.
2. Son—Martinus Cosine.
3. Daughter—Elizabeth Cosine.
4. Son—Peter Cosine.

His wife, Williampe Cosine, and his "two trusty friends" Cornelius Cosine and Simon Vanarsdalen were named executors. The witnesses were John Bodine, Peter Cosine (?) and Garret Vanarsdalen.

In the list of deaths you probably noticed many names that are not to be found in either of the Low Dutch graveyards. The burial ground commonly called "Osborne's" contains the greatest number of readable markers. The graveyard at the other end of the settlement is practically devoid of any worthwhile data. The fact remains, however, that when one compares the number of deaths that must have occurred while the colony was located here, does not, in any way, compare with the number of marked graves that have thus far been located. This is to be regretted for the Low Dutch Colony constitutes one of the most interesting phases of county history. Many noted and outstanding people came from this background and were proud of it as they had a perfect right to be.

Several weeks ago the list of inscriptions, as copied by the Rev. David Demarest in the Low Dutch graveyards, was found by the author of this column. When compared with lists made in 1933 only a few additions could be made to the later work. Evidently as early as the Rev. Demarest's day the work of time and vandals had already begun.

We will continue our notes on the Low Dutch Graveyard next week.

ASKS AMATEURS NOT TO FILM OBJECTS OF WAR

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Byron Price, the censorship director, asks amateur photographers to refrain from using their talents on military objects.

"There are many good photographic subjects besides fortifications, airports, troop transports and equipment of the armed forces," he said in a statement issued last night, adding that "even the private circulation of many such pictures domestically can do harm, and of course no military pictures can be permitted to leave the country unless they have been made under government supervision."

Films Stopped at Borders

He reminded photographers that prints or films stopped by censors at the border are wasted and in these days "waste is unwise."

Price commended camera clubs which have made known a desire to cooperate with the government in this connection and said "detailed information about the handling of all types of films by international mail, freight, or express is being prepared and will be made public soon."

Acknowledging that his office had been asked why photographs of army camps, warships and war production plants had been made public by magazines, news reel companies and newspapers, Price explained:

No Cause for Apprehension

"I believe there is little real cause for apprehension. These pictures normally have been approved in advance by the government for publication in order to show the American people what the armed services are doing and what American factories are producing. They have been closely inspected to make certain that they contain no details which the enemy might like to see. Editors voluntarily are making a careful check on the photographs they use.

"It must be remembered also that until the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor last December 7, there were no limitations on the mailing of pictures to foreign countries. It would be futile to ask American editors not to print photographs which could have been taken before that time, for the enemy unquestionably has the information."

Rear Admiral's Daughter Suicides

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Baroness Alletta A. Korff, 65, daughter of a rear admiral in the U.S. Navy and widow of a Russian noble, was found hanging from a rope in a closet leading to the attic in her home today.

The body was found by her son-in-law, Squadron Leader Edward A. Russell, R.A.F., who is in Washington on a special assignment for the British government.

Russell was called to open his mother-in-law's home after her maid reported she had been locked out all night and repeated knocking on the door failed to bring an answer.

Victory Gardens

This is the sixth and last in a series of stories on how to get the most out of your war garden.

By ROBERT GEIGER

Pack your 1942 War Garden with vitamins but add a rose—for morale.

Even realistic experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, advocating utmost efficiency in this year's gardening program, recommend a flower or two.

"It's a desirable form of diversion that places practically no drain on the war effort and is especially valuable now as a form of morale-building recreation," say department experts.

"With growing restrictions on motoring, many persons who have not paid much attention to flower growing in the past may find time for development of this hobby."

Special Suggestions

Colorado Agriculture college, which conducted a short course in flower gardening, has prepared some special suggestions for the 1942 war garden worker.

"An all-out effort in 'fireside gardening' when the new spring catalogs first arrive usually lays down a plan that is too ambitious," says George Beach, assistant professor of horticulture. "What might have been an enjoyable pastime becomes a chore. Attempt no more than you can handle as orphaned flower beds are a forlorn sight."

Beach has made a special study of flower gardening under conditions that usually confront city dwellers. These are his suggestions:

Preparation: Spade or plow at least eight inches deep even for small plants. Take special care for perennials that must stand in the same soil for several years without re-plowing.

Work the soil finely.

Cultivation: Everyone must study his own soil and learn when it can be cultivated to best advantage. The object of cultivation is to kill weeds and to keep a loose soil surface that prevents evaporation of moisture from the underlying soil.

Soak Plants Thoroughly

Watering: A thorough soaking is best, penetrating two feet or more. When the surface has dried so that the soil doesn't clod when worked, it may be cultivated. Infrequent, thorough watering is better than daily sprinkling that packs the soil and puddles.

Planting designs: Simple designs usually give the most pleasant effect for the beginners. Flowers generally give a better appearance if they are backgrounded by shrubbery, walls or fences, rather than large expanses of lawn.

What to plant: Gardens with as few as three varieties in them frequently are the most attractive. Annuals that grow readily include Sweet Peas, Asters, Zinnias, Marigolds, Petunias, Nasturtium, Verbena, Pansy, Snapdragon and Four O'clock. The list of perennials include Iris, Phlox, Peony, Delphinium, Perennial Aster, Oriental Poppy, Painted Daisy, Gaillardia, Coreopsis and Babybreath.

Production of passenger automobiles in Canada will be halted as soon as parts on hand have been used.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

REASON

How few people reason things out. It is so much easier to take some one else's opinion, or to stick to an opinion already decided upon, regardless of fact or truth.

Everyone has a right to think as he pleases, but all thought should be guided by reason. All truth is built from basic principles, and if these are neglected, or carelessly shoved aside, there is little basis at all for constructive talk.

How delightful it is to talk with one whose mind is always open to reason, and who welcomes all possible light to be shed upon doubtful opinions. There is always something to be gained from contact with another mind, and most, of course, where that mind keeps nothing back, but freely expresses itself that it, too, may gain and learn.

Once you form the habit of reasoning things out you will be amazed how efficient you become at times when you have to act fast—and accurately.

Better to remain silent than enter into a conversation in which you are ill prepared to furnish intelligent opinions. On the other hand, if you have become practiced in reasoning things out under all circumstances, you will be that much better prepared to enter any talk at any time, and acquit yourself well and honorably.

Bitterness alone results from talk with those who will not reason—who are opinionated and will not listen to fair statements. Time thus spent is futile and wasted, and the thrill of conversation and intellectual nourishment is taken from you.

How many difficult problems could be quickly worked out if people would but get together and reason out all the related facts. All big problems are actually much more simple than they seem or appear. The obvious thing, when confronted with an unexpected task, is to reason out the best possible solution.

You always get right back where you started with a person if he refuses to reason. And no one gets anywhere!

Just Folks

THE BRAVE

A few brave minutes mark the man
And cowards all betray.
The strong fight back as best they can.
The weaklings run away.

The bold give battle blow for blow
Nor flinch from blows they take.
Enough it is for them to know
They fight for freedom's sake.

But if they fall, they know shall rise
Another force ere long
To battle land and sea and skies,
Stronger than they were strong.

They never doubt their cause is just
Nor ever think to flee;
The brave are sure, with time, they must
Be given victory.

88,754 Wrecked Cars In State's 1,223 Auto Graveyards

ENOUGH METAL TO BUILD TEN BATTLESHIPS

Harrisburg, March 14 (AP)—A state-wide survey today disclosed 1,223 scrap yards in Pennsylvania containing 88,754 wrecked automobiles and trucks—enough metal to build 10 battleships of 35,000 tons each.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Works Projects Administration made the survey in an effort to speed the flow of scrap to hungry steel mills. A salvage drive is being conducted by the state Defense Council.

The 551 urban junkyards included in the WPA check showed 51,016 wrecked vehicles while the Department of Agriculture located 37,738 cars and trucks in 677 rural graveyards. Officials estimated each averaged a ton of metal.

Philadelphia topped the list of counties with 116 graveyards containing 7,633 vehicles. Allegheny was next with 91 and 6,900 respectively with Northampton third at 15 and 6,405. Beaver, Lancaster and Washington had slightly more than 3,000 vehicles.

There were no graveyards in Fulton county while Forest had five with five vehicles.

Need Scrap Metal

Announcing results of the survey, Chairman James E. Walker of the agriculture department's state War Board said that during recent months furnaces having an annual capacity of several million tons had been forced to shut down solely due to lack of iron and steel scrap. He said the iron and steel scrap shortage for 1942 was estimated at a minimum of six million tons.

While declaring operators of scrap yards would be offered a fair price for their material, Walker added that "in cases where fair offers are rejected, government investigation will follow and the power of requisition may be invoked."

He asked state War Boards to provide names and addresses of any junkyards withholding scrap and also of dealers paying prices "substantially below the local price levels calculated from a price map."

AGED FIRE CHIEF DIES

Erie, Pa., March 14 (AP)—Michael P. Leonard, 87, who rose from the rank of a "Minute Man" back in the 80's to become fire chief in 1928, died yesterday. He was a fireman for more than a half-century. Despite his advanced age he was active as chief until a few weeks ago. Surviving are a son, Raymond, and a daughter, Miss Marian Leonard.

Flashes of Life

WINDFALL

Newport News, Va. (AP)—After paying some bills, William Greer wound up $4 short.

He asked two stores to check their cash receipts for the day to find out whether they were $4 ahead.

One store called Greer later and said: "Our cash balance is $4 over. We are mailing you a check."

Then the other store called. The mystified Greer was told: "Our cash balance is $4 over. We are mailing you a check."

HO-HUM

Kansas City (AP)—Uncle Sam had better pick up Kansas City's 46 tons of scrap steel before it shrinks to a rivet.

Assistant City Engineer Ray Blessing has been trying since last December to obtain permission from the Office of Production Management to sell the street viaduct salvage.

Meanwhile, thieves have stolen one ton of the metal.

TAXING POETS TOO?

Albuquerque, N. M. (AP)—The internal revenue collector is finding new evidence of the broad scope of this year's income tax law—poets are paying too.

"Come little ten-spot, shoulder arms; we'll prove the Japs are false alarms," read a note attached to one report.

Another, pinned to a $5 bill: "Here's a fin—to help us win."

PIKERS!

Spokane, Wash. (AP)—Pvt. Carl Schroegel has 13 letters in his name, has been in the Army a month and 13 days and was married 13 days after enlisting. He got a 13 word telegram from his bride on Friday the 13th, asking him to meet her in Seattle.

But the Army gave him just 12 hours leave.

Irvin Confirmed As State WPA Chief

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Senate confirmation gave Pennsylvania a new WPA administrator today. He is Richard Irvin, Pittsburgh architect and engineer whom President Roosevelt nominated for the post.

Irvin helped organize the original WPA set-up in the state and has been associated with various private and public building projects for many years.

He succeeds Col. Philip Mathews, who resigned several months ago. An acting administrator took over during the interim. The post pays $8,000 a year.

ASKS AMATEURS NOT TO FILM OBJECTS OF WAR

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Byron Price, the censorship director, asks amateur photographers to refrain from using their talents on military objects.

"There are many good photographic subjects besides fortifications, airports, troop transports and equipment of the armed forces," he said in a statement issued last night, adding that "even the private circulation of many such pictures domestically can do harm, and of course no military pictures can be permitted to leave the country unless they have been made under government supervision."

Films Stopped at Borders

He reminded photographers that prints or films stopped by censors at the border are wasted and in these days "waste is unwise."

Price commended camera clubs which have made known a desire to cooperate with the government in this connection and said "detailed information about the handling of all types of films by international mail, freight, or express is being prepared and will be made public soon."

Acknowledging that his office had been asked why photographs of army camps, warships and war production plants had been made public by magazines, news reel companies and newspapers, Price explained:

No Cause for Apprehension

"I believe there is little real cause for apprehension. These pictures normally have been approved in advance by the government for publication in order to show the American people what the armed services are doing and what American factories are producing. They have been closely inspected to make certain that they contain no details which the enemy might like to see. Editors voluntarily are making a careful check on the photographs they use.

"It must be remembered also that until the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor last December 7, there were no limitations on the mailing of pictures to foreign countries. It would be futile to ask American editors not to print photographs which could have been taken before that time, for the enemy unquestionably has the information."

Rear Admiral's Daughter Suicides

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Baroness Alletta A. Korff, 65, daughter of a rear admiral in the U.S. Navy and widow of a Russian noble, was found hanging from a rope in a closet leading to the attic in her home today.

The body was found by her son-in-law, Squadron Leader Edward A. Russell, R.A.F., who is in Washington on a special assignment for the British government.

Russell was called to open his mother-in-law's home after her maid reported she had been locked out all night and repeated knocking on the door failed to bring an answer.

The baroness' physician, Dr. Alexander Lyons, said she had been despondent and in ill health for a year.

Backgrounds of Adams County

No. 232—Odds And Ends Of "Low Dutch History"

B. F. MacPHERSON

Among the notes on the history of the Low Dutch Settlement in Adams County are a great many miscellaneous notes of unusual interest. These are given here exactly as taken from the original record.

"Among the first of the Jersey colonists to locate in York county (now Adams) was James Petit, whose ancestor was one of the early Huguenot refugees to New Jersey As early as 1740 this James possessed a cinsiderable estate in the Conewago. He died in 1771 at an advanced age. Abram La Rue, who died in 1757, and Abram de Gomois, both Huguenot pioneers from New Jersey, were also among the early settlers.

"David Demaree (Demorest) was born in 1731 and died in 1808. He was a descendant of a Hugenot refugee of the same name, born in Beauchamp, France, in 1620, who came to New York State in 1663 because of religious persecution.

Dutch Colonist

"Frederick Banta was the grandson of Professor Epke Banta, a Dutch colonist who died at Schrallenberg in 1719.

"John Bodine, who died at Conewago in 1776, at a very advanced age, was the grandson of a Huguenot refugee, one Jean Bodine, who died on Long Island, New York, in 1695.

"George Brocaw, who died in 1794, was a descendant of Pierre Brocaw, a French refugee who settled in New York prior to 1680. Andre Ridett died in 1776; Michael Le Boob died in 1781; Adam de Corsine died in 1779; Cornelius Corsine died in 1786. He was a soldier of the Revolution. Peter Cosine died in 1779. He was probably a son of the Cornelius mentioned above. Peter Montfort, the progenitor of a noble family, died at an advanced age in 1769.

Magdelena Brokaw, whose father and brothers fought in the Revolution, had her thumbs ground in British gunlocks because she refused to give information concerning her relatives. At that time she was only sixteen years of age.

Old Peter Scalped

"Old Peter Van Arsdale was scalped in his own clearing and a Banta was taken prisoner and carried into the wilderness."

These scraps of information were taken from letters and notes of the Rev. David Demarest whose history of the Low Dutch Settlement was one of the earliest, if not the first, to be written. Historians consider them of great interest and for that reason they are presented in this column.

The Peter Cosine who is mentioned above as having died in 1779 is quite probably buried in an unmarked grave in the Low Dutch Graveyard. His will is to be found in the York County Courthouse in Will Book "E," page 37. In this testament, which was written June 29, 1779 and entered to probate October 26, 1779, he mentions the following members of his family:

1. Wife—Williampe (?) Cosine.
2. Son—Martinus Cosine.
3. Daughter—Elizabeth Cosine.
4. Son—Peter Cosine.

His wife, Williampe Cosine, and his "two trusty friends" Cornelius Cosine and Simon Vanarsdalen were named executors. The witnesses were John Bodine, Peter Cosine (?) and Garret Vanarsdalen.

In the list of deaths you probably noticed many names that are not to be found in either of the Low Dutch graveyards. The burial ground commonly called "Osborne's" contains the greatest number of readable markers. The graveyard at the other end of the settlement is practically devoid of any worthwhile data. The fact remains, however, that when one compares the number of deaths that must have occurred while the colony was located here, does not, in any way, compare with the number of marked graves that have thus far been located. This is to be regretted for the Low Dutch Colony constitutes one of the most interesting phases of county history. Many noted and outstanding people came from this background and were proud of it as they had a perfect right to be.

Several weeks ago the list of inscriptions, as copied by the Rev. David Demarest in the Low Dutch graveyards, was found by the author of this column. When compared with lists made in 1933 only a few additions could be made to the later work. Evidently as early as the Rev. Demarest's day the work of time and vandals had already begun.

We will continue our notes on the Low Dutch Graveyard next week.

Victory Gardens

This is the sixth and last in a series of stories on how to get the most out of your war garden.

By ROBERT GEIGER

Pack your 1942 War Garden with vitamins but add a rose—for morale. Even realistic experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, advocating utmost efficiency in this year's gardening program, recommend a flower or two.

"It's a desirable form of diversion that places practically no drain on the war effort and is especially valuable now as a form of morale-building recreation," say department experts.

"With growing restrictions on motoring, many persons who have not paid much attention to flower growing in the past may find time for development of this hobby."

Special Suggestions

Colorado Agriculture college, which conducted a short course in flower gardening, has prepared some special suggestions for the 1942 war garden worker.

"An all-out effort in 'fireside gardening' when the new spring catalogs first arrive usually lays down a plan that is too ambitious," says George Beach, assistant professor of horticulture. "What might have been an enjoyable pastime becomes a chore. Attempt no more than you can handle as orphaned flower beds are a forlorn sight."

Beach has made a special study of flower gardening under conditions that usually confront city dwellers. These are his suggestions:

Preparation: Spade or plow at least eight inches deep even for small plants. Take special care for perennials that must stand in the same soil for several years without re-plowing.

Work the soil finely.

Cultivation: Everyone must study his own soil and learn when it can be cultivated to best advantage. The object of cultivation is to kill weeds and to keep a loose soil surface that prevents evaporation of moisture from the underlying soil.

Soak Plants Thoroughly

Watering: A thorough soaking is best, penetrating two feet or more. When the surface has dried so that the soil doesn't clod when worked, it may be cultivated. Infrequent, thorough watering is better than daily sprinkling that packs the soil and puddles.

Planting designs: Simple designs usually give the most pleasant effect for the beginners. Flowers generally give a better appearance if they are backgrounded by shrubbery, walls or fences, rather than large expanses of lawn.

What to plant: Gardens with as few as three varieties in them frequently are the most attractive. Annuals that grow readily include Sweet Peas, Asters, Zinnias, Marigolds, Petunias, Nasturtium, Verbena, Pansy, Snapdragon and Four O'clock. The list of perennials include Iris, Phlox, Peony, Delphinium, Perennial Aster, Oriental Poppy, Painted Daisy, Gaillardia, Coreopsis and Babybreath.

Production of passenger automobiles in Canada will be halted as soon as parts on hand have been used.

3 PC. RECEIVE COUNTY RELIEF

Slightly more than three per cent of the county's population was receiving some form of relief through the Department of Public Assistance, the monthly report submitted at the March meeting of the members of the county Assistance board disclosed Thursday afternoon. Although there were slight changes in the number of cases receiving various types of assistance, the net change from January's total was slight, the report showed.

In February there were 500 cases of old age assistance, a decrease of one from the January total; 88 blind pension cases, an increase of two; 120 cases of aid to dependent children, the same as in January, and 99 general assistance cases, a drop of 19 chiefly due to change in department routine and bookkeeping rather than any great drop in the number of persons involved.

Old Age Leads

Of the 1,324 persons on relief in this county last month, more than 1,100 were being aided on the old age assistance and aid to dependent children list.

Routine business matters were discussed and a field representative from Harrisburg explained to the board the stamp plan which has displaced the present system of distributing surplus commodities in many counties in the state. No action was required of the county board.

Mrs. Mary K. McClean, acting chairman of the board since the recent resignation of James B. Aumen, presided at the meeting. The assistance load report was submitted by Col. J. L. Barton, executive director of the relief office here.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. by FREDERICK C. RUSSELL, Member S. A. E.

The less you show off on the road the better you are apt to show up as a motor citizen.

Keep 'Em Ready!

As many readers have already discovered this column is concentrating on doing its share toward winning the war by helping motorists keep their cars in such shape that emergencies are not going to find them with broken down, unreliable equipment. With transportation so essential to the conduct of the war, and with the automobile playing such an important role in transportation, the need for leaving no stone unturned in providing intelligent care of the car is obvious. What many of us may not realize, however, is that we must be careful to see that we obtain best results with a minimum of effort, time and expense. With civilian defense so vital, and all the other war services calling for our best efforts, it is highly important to find the short cuts, to buy the best in service (which is always the cheapest in the long run) and to learn all we can that will prevent the development of car trouble.

Here's A Good Example

Sticky valves are common enough source of motor annoyance, but right now this sort of trouble assumes new proportions. Before the war you could perhaps afford to put up with valve stickings on the theory that if you burned the valves you could order a new set of them when you had the cylinder head removed for a tune-up. Now you will need to get at stickage the minute it develops, or preferably before it even has a chance to gang up on you. Put valve oil in with the crankcase oil. Occasionally give the engine a valve treatment out in the open, running the engine fast and pouring a pint of valve oil into the carburetor after removing the air cleaner. Sticky valves waste gas and oil. If they are not corrected they will be subjected to combustion flame and will warp.

The Motor Primer

Orchids to readers who are brushing up on fundamentals. Take that matter of compression, for instance. We should know that the power we are going to get out of a charge of gas vapor depends mostly on how tightly a piston packs it when coming up on its compression stroke. But we seem to think this all depends on how the engineers designed the motor whereas we're not at all on the sidelines here. Compression doesn't reach the point for which the engine was designed if the rings leak. Nor will compression be normal if the valves do not seat properly. Valves are particularly apt to leak if their tappets are set too close. Just as soon as clearance is taken up by expansion of the valve stems the valves do not seat tightly and compression is lost. That means lost power.

Mechanic Joe Speaking:

"Motorists who have had occasion to check for high oil consumption have found that oil can be lost at some odd places around an engine. They have seen that even a loose spark plug will permit oil to suck up, but oddly enough one of the most likely points of oil loss in a worn engine is usually overlooked.

"I'm talking about worn valve guides. When the intake valves open the cylinders fill up with gas vapor drawn in by suction created by the pistons. If there is any way the pistons can suck air, oil or gas other than through the intake they will promptly do so. What is more natural than that they should suck oil and air from around worn valve guides? This oil and air come from the valve compartment."

When To Curb Them

There are two ways to curb the front wheels of your car. One is bump the curbing as the car comes to a stop; the other is to stop the car and then turn the wheels to the curb. The first one is definitely wrong, and I can suggest a way to improve the latter. As you stop the car, cut the front wheels toward the curb. You'll find that with the car slightly in motion you can do an easier job (with less strain) cutting the wheels.

Waste In Lower Gears

In trying to do your bit toward saving rubber and gas for helping to win the war, don't forget that you can be most extravagant in the lower gears. Too often the temptation is to think of waste only in driving fast in high gear. Check over your driving habits and note how often you build up entirely too much momentum in low gear. Second can be very wasteful if you use it to do stunts in traffic. It is a fine gear for congestion but something that should be saved for better days. Perhaps you have never thought of it, but every inch you rock the car is waste except where you are turning around so as to avoid going all the way around a circle or the block. Private driveways are a means to many saved miles, but even in backing and turning there are ways to cut down on the number of operations. Cut the front wheels as sharply as you can, and move slowly so that you are not having to kill momentum with your brakes.

Taking Off The Head

If you are planning to spend the week-end taking off the cylinder head for carbon removal be sure you remember a simple little trick that will speed the job. Since the gasket will stick you will find it difficult to remove the head even after the nuts are unscrewed and taken off their studs, but you can get around this difficulty by stepping on the starter for a moment or two. Don't switch on the ignition. When the engine is turned over by the starter the pistons will build up enough compression within the cylinders to push the head up. Be certain to leave spark plugs in.

One Job For You

Maybe you have noticed that the high tension wire to the center of the distributor cap sometimes is found to be a bit loose. But did you ever stop to realize that if any of the other high tension wires are loose at the distributor cap you may also get high resistance and poor ignition? It is a good plan to pull out the wires now and again, one at a time so as not to get them out of their correct order, clean the ends and then plug them in again. Corrosion at their ends is a frequent cause of poor ignition.

A Useful Trio

Your car will not get such rough treatment if you remember to revise tire pressures downward for city travel. Usually city streets are not as smooth as the open road and super-highways.

When you have the oil changed be sure the engine is well warmed up. Not only does the old oil drain off more fully but you save a dose of dilution when starting the engine again.

It used to be a good idea to crank the engine a few minutes before switching on the ignition and using the choke. This helped to limber it up and got the oiling system into action before the cylinders started firing. We have to forgo this with downdraft carburetion of today's car, and where automatic chokes are used, because too much cranking simply floods the engine with raw gas.

What's Your Car Trouble?

Q. The engine of my car makes a peculiar hissing noise. None of the spark plugs is loose. G. F.

A A spark plug, porcelain may be broken. Check also for a loose exhaust pipe.

Q I have found that the entire exhaust system of my car, including the muffler, gets very hot even in cold weather. What would cause this? The muffler is a modern straight-through type so it can't be clogged. F. W. B.

A. If you find that the carburetor mixture is all right then the chances are this overheating is due to the valves not being properly timed A very late spark will have the same effect.

Q. I have been having all kinds of trouble with burned valves. Have replaced five of them in the past few months. My policy has been to buy factory parts but I wonder if valves are not being made as well as previously. The engine does not overheat, and I have not used any one particular brand of gas. Hope you can help me. G. G. L

A. You will find that the valves are burning because they are "bouncing" at higher speeds That is, they do not close properly, flame thus licking the upper part of the valve stems and under their heads This usually is due to weak valve springs, but of course gummed valves that stick will have the same effect.

Q. The engine of my car has a stroke of 4½ inches. Can you tell me how many feet per minute the pistons are traveling when the crankshaft is turning 2000 rpm? F. K.

A. The pistons would be traveling 1500 feet per minute

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Alice F. Herring, who departed this life seven years ago today, March 14, 1935.

Oh how well we all remembered,
The day you left our side;
Many friends spoke words of comfort,
But our hearts were sorely tried.

One thought comes to us in our sadness,
She is free from all sickness and pain;
And we trust when our journey is ended,
We will meet our dear wife and mother again.

Her loving husband and sons

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of Etta O. Tuckey, who died one year ago, March 15, 1941.

When the evening sun is setting.
At the end of a perfect day,
We think of you, dear mother,
And how you passed away.

The flowers we place upon the grave
May wither and decay.
But love for you who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.

Sadly missed by her

SHOW BOAT GIRL
By ROBERTA COURTLAND

YESTERDAY: Rand Hendricks, who dropped into Melissa Marlowe's life one day, was the only interesting stranger Melissa ever had seen—up to the time her grandmother died and she sold the cabin for $300 and decided to go to New Orleans. Now she finds her $300 melting fast, and nothing much to show for it but some nice new clothes, and the unexpected friendship of a hard-boiled blonde saleswoman

Chapter Six
News of Rand

Almost a hundred dollars! That, with the hotel bill, meant almost half of her entire store of money was gone! Panic swept her for a moment and then she fought it back. She had a hundred and fifty dollars left; and if the morning had shaken her belief in the enormity of that sum, she knew that she had to have clothes in which to look for work

"I'll send them up to the hotel right away," said the blonde, bringing her the two or three small bills and the change from the hundred dollars that Melissa had given her. I'll get them off before I go to lunch"

"Lunch!" said Melissa, and remembered she had had nothing to eat since breakfast. There was a sudden little eager light in her eyes. "I wonder—I'm a stranger in town and I don't know my way around at all. Would you—would you mind having lunch with me?"

"Would I mind? Lady, I'd love it," said the blonde with gratifying promptness. "Wait until I wash my hands and paint myself a fresh face and we'll tie on the feed-bag at a little beanery I know that's not too bad."

The blonde came back, smart and cool and very much mistress of the occasion. Melissa trotted beside her, her heart filled with gratitude towards this, the first friend she had made in the huge, terrifying city; only somehow, walking beside this cool, wise blonde, she didn't feel that the city was either so large or so terrifying after all. A trifle cockily, she told herself she was going to lick this town! And if the picture of a man's face danced a bit before the eyes of her heart—well, after all, she was only a little more than seventeen and he was the only young, attractive man she had ever met.

Small Quarrel

In the small, clattery, crowded tea-room to which the blonde had steered her, they found a tiny table wedged in a corner and the blonde ordered briskly, with the air of one clearing the decks for action.

When the waitress had gone, the blonde leaned across the table toward Melissa and said cheerfully, "O.K., keed, let's have the lowdown. What's the set-up? What's a babe like you doing in the wicked city all alone and untended, with a mess of money in your purse—and clothes out of a rummage sale?"

Melissa told her simply, "I've lived all my life down the river—a lamptender. My grandmother died, and a man wanted to buy the place where we lived and tend the light and I sold it to him—for three hundred dollars. And now I've got to get a job and make a living for myself. That's all."

"That's plenty," said the blonde vigorously. "A job doing what, if you don't mind my asking?"

Melissa colored a little, but met the wise blue eyes steadily. "I sing a little and dance and play the guitar. My mother taught me. She was Sadie Marlowe."

The blonde nodded. "You and about a million other babes," she said drily, and studied Melissa for a long moment before she said impulsively, "Look, keed you're an awful babe. I mean, why don't you just have yourself a few days' fun and then pick up your marbles and beat it back to the old homestead and the light and the rest of it? This town is no place for a sweet, innocent, unsophisticated kid like you."

"But I can't," protested Melissa swiftly. "I sold the place—and the job"

The waitress came then, bringing their food. After she had gone, the blonde crushed out the tip of her cigarette in the green glass tray beside her and said grimly, "I don't know why I do things like this, but if you're bent on staying in town and finding yourself a job, I suppose I'll have to take you in hand."

Melissa flushed and her head went up a little.

"I don't see why you should," she said coolly

The blonde grinned wryly.

"Well, for one reason, you gave me the best day's business I've had in ten years," she admitted frankly. "The commissions on the stuff you bought from me will come in plenty handy. And for another reason, I wouldn't sleep at night if I just turned you loose among the wolves. Nope, I'll have to keep an eye on you from here on out."

Melissa laughed. "It's awfully nice of you, but there's honestly no reason—"

"And since when did Irene Graham have to have a reason for anything? I forgot—did I tell you Irene Graham was my name? Well, it is! And now stop arguing and eat your lunch and let me think a bit," said the blonde firmly.

Melissa dug a fork into her shrimp salad, tasted it and decided she liked it very much. Irene gave her attention to her food and for a moment they were silent. And then Melissa asked shyly:

"Do you know a man named Rand Hendricks?"

Irene looked up, startled.

"Ace" Hendricks?" she asked sharply.

"No, his name is Rand—he says people call him Randy—"

"Then he's a liar—people call him Ace. And how'd a kid like you, from out back of beyond, ever meet up with that guy, anyway?" demanded Irene, more than a trace of belligerance in her voice.

Melissa stared at her, round-eyed, startled at the effect of her innocent question.

"He came to our cabin once when he got lost on a hunting trip," she explained. "I thought he was—well, very nice."

"Well, that just goes to show how little you know about men," snapped Irene. "He's a wolf—he's a tough egg—he's bad medicine for nice little kids like you—and you forget you ever heard of him, did you hear?"

Melissa's eyes chilled a little. "I'll do nothing of the sort," she said stiffly. "He asked me to telephone him if I ever came to town—and I'm going to, this very day!"

Irene studied her for a moment, and then she shrugged and picked up her fork again. "My mistake," she said formally. "So sorry. I stuck my neck out—but way out!—for that one. Forget I mentioned it."

Melissa said swiftly, stricken by shame. "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to be rude. You've been awfully kind and good to me and I do appreciate it—honestly I do. It's only that—well, ever since last year I've had the thought of seeing him again in my mind. I've—well, I've counted on it so much."

Irene nodded, still cool and formal. "Then by all means give him a ring. He'll be tickled pink. Wear the yellow crepe when you meet him again. He's a push-over for yellow—it matches the stripe down his back."

Melissa started and her eyes widened. And after a moment she said quietly. "You do know him well, don't you? Only it can't possibly be the same man I know."

"Want to bet on it?" asked Irene drily.

Melissa stared at her, and for a moment great crystal tears were in her eyes. After she'd seen them Irene put out a hand whose nails were long and brilliantly red and patted Melissa's hand in an almost awkward gesture.

"Forget it, babe—Ace Hendricks is a guy who doesn't like women. And—I'm a woman who couldn't help liking Ace — the guy is so damned attractive. And—well, he grinned at me and told me to go chase myself, and I've had it in for him ever since. He's a big-shot gambler, you know. Has one of the swankiest place in town, and its whispered around that he's backed by some of the town's most worthy citizens.

Melissa was bewildered and shaken.

"That doesn't sound a bit like Randy," she observed, crestfallen.

Irene grinned wryly.

"Well, of course it could be a couple of other fellows," admitted Irene, "but I don't think so."

She studied Melissa shrewdly and then she said suddenly. "Tell you what. You go give him a ring and make a date with him, and let me be with you when you meet him. Then if it's not the same guy I know, I'll blow out and leave you two together. If it is the same guy—well, we'll worry about that later."

Melissa hesitated, reluctant. And yet she knew that there was wisdom in what Irene said. If Randy—the Randy who had occupied so large a piece in her dreams and plans and hopes for the past year—was really this "Ace" Hendricks that Irene knew, then she wanted not to see or think of him any more; but if he were not, then— She stood up and moved toward a telephone at the back of the room.

Her hands shook a little as she took down the receiver and with awkward, inexpert hands dialed the number. She made three trials before she succeeded in getting the right number. The man's voice, cautious, wary, said. "Yes?"

"I'd like to speak to Mr. Hendricks, please," she said, steadily her ricks, please," she said steadying her voice with an effort.

"Yeah?" answered the man's voice drily. "Who's calling?"

"Tell him Melissa Marlowe—from down the river," she answered, and waited breathlessly, her heart pounding hard.

There was a brief delay, and then a voice that had the power to make little silver bells tingle deep in her heart said sharply, "Hello? Who the blazes—what's all this hocus-pocus?"

Melissa said, steadying her voice, clinging to the telephone, her eyes bright, "Randy, this is Melissa. Don't you remember me?"

"Melissa?" he repeated, and his voice vibrated a little beneath the tone. "Not the little lamplighter girl!"

"But of course," she answered, and laughter caught at her voice, laughter that was a shining web, crossed by tears that threatened her and made tears that threatened her and said if I ever come to town I was to call you—"

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Alice F. Herring, who departed this life seven years ago today, March 14, 1935.

Oh how well we all remembered,
The day you left our side;
Many friends spoke words of comfort,
But our hearts were sorely tried.

One thought comes to us in our sadness,
She is free from all sickness and pain;
And we trust when our journey is ended,
We will meet our dear wife and mother again.

Her loving husband and sons

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of Etta O. Tuckey, who died one year ago, March 15, 1941.

When the evening sun is setting,
At the end of a perfect day,
We think of you, dear mother,
And how you passed away.

The flowers we place upon the grave
May wither and decay,
But love for you who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.

Sadly missed by her

SHOW BOAT GIRL
By ROBERTA COURTLAND

YESTERDAY: Rand Hendricks, who dropped into Melissa Marlowe's life one day, was the only interesting stranger Melissa ever had seen—up to the time her grandmother died and she sold the cabin for $300 and decided to go to New Orleans. Now she finds her $300 melting fast, and nothing much to show for it but some nice new clothes, and the unexpected friendship of a hard-boiled blonde saleswoman.

Chapter Six
News of Rand

Almost a hundred dollars! That, with the hotel bill, meant almost half of her entire store of money was gone! Panic swept her for a moment and then she fought it back. She had a hundred and fifty dollars left; and if the morning had shaken her belief in the enormity of that sum, she knew that she had to have clothes in which to look for work.

"I'll send them up to the hotel right away," said the blonde, bringing her the two or three small bills and the change from the hundred dollars that Melissa had given her. "I'll get them off before I go to lunch."

"Lunch!" said Melissa, and remembered she had had nothing to eat since breakfast. There was a sudden little eager light in her eyes. "I wonder—I'm a stranger in town and I don't know my way around at all. Would you—would you mind having lunch with me?"

"Would I mind? Lady, I'd love it," said the blonde with gratifying promptness. "Wait until I wash my hands and paint myself a fresh face and we'll tie on the feed-bag at a little beanery I know that's not too bad."

The blonde came back, smart and cool and very much mistress of the occasion. Melissa trotted beside her, her heart filled with gratitude towards this, the first friend she had made in the huge, terrifying city; only somehow, walking beside this cool, wise blonde, she didn't feel that the city was either so large or so terrifying after all. A trifle cockily, she told herself she was going to lick this town! And if the picture of a man's face danced a bit before the eyes of her heart—well, after all, she was only a little more than seventeen and he was the only young, attractive man she had ever met.

Small Quarrel

In the small, clattery, crowded tea-room to which the blonde had steered her, they found a tiny table wedged in a corner and the blonde ordered briskly, with the air of one clearing the decks for action.

When the waitress had gone, the blonde leaned across the table toward Melissa and said cheerfully, "O.K., keed, let's have the lowdown. What's the set-up? What's a babe like you doing in the wicked city all alone and untended, with a mess of money in your purse—and clothes out of a rummage sale?"

Melissa told her simply, "I've lived all my life down the river—a lamptender. My grandmother died, and a man wanted to buy the place where we lived and tend the light and I sold it to him—for three hundred dollars. And now I've got to get a job and make a living for myself. That's all."

"That's plenty," said the blonde vigorously. "A job doing what, if you don't mind my asking?"

Melissa colored a little, but met the wise blue eyes steadily. "I sing a little and dance—and play the guitar. My mother taught me. She was Sadie Marlowe."

The blonde nodded. "You and about a million other babes," she said drily, and studied Melissa for a long moment before she said impulsively, "Look, keed you're an awful babe. I mean, why don't you just have yourself a few days' fun and then pick up your marbles and beat it back to the old homestead and the light and the rest of it? This town is no place for a sweet, innocent, unsophisticated kid like you."

"But I can't," protested Melissa swiftly. "I sold the place—and the job"—

The waitress came then, bringing their food. After she had gone, the blonde crushed out the tip of her cigarette in the green glass tray beside her and said grimly, "I don't know why I do things like this, but if you're bent on staying in town and finding yourself a job, I suppose I'll have to take you in hand."

Melissa flushed and her head went up a little.

"I don't see why you should," she said coolly.

The blonde grinned wryly.

"Well, for one reason, you gave me the best day's business I've had in ten years," she admitted frankly. "The commissions on the stuff you bought from me will come in plenty handy. And for another reason, I wouldn't sleep at night if I just turned you loose among the wolves. Nope, I'll have to keep an eye on you from here on out."

Melissa laughed. "It's awfully nice of you, but there's honestly no reason—"

"And since when did Irene Graham have to have a reason for anything? I forgot—did I tell you Irene Graham was my name? Well, it is! And now stop arguing and eat your lunch and let me think a bit," said the blonde firmly.

Melissa dug a fork into her shrimp salad, tasted it and decided she liked it very much. Irene gave her attention to her food and for a moment they were silent. And then Melissa asked shyly:

"Do you know a man named Rand Hendricks?"

Irene looked up, startled.

"Ace" Hendricks?" she asked sharply.

"No, his name is Rand—he says people call him Randy—"

"Then he's a liar—people call him Ace. And how'd a kid like you, from out back of beyond, ever meet up with that guy, anyway?" demanded Irene, more than a trace of belligerance in her voice.

Melissa stared at her, round-eyed, startled at the effect of her innocent question.

"He came to our cabin once when he got lost on a hunting trip," she explained. "I thought he was—well, very nice."

"Well, that just goes to show how little you know about men," snapped Irene. "He's a wolf—he's a tough egg—he's bad medicine for nice little kids like you—and you forget you ever neard of him, did you hear?"

Melissa's eyes chilled a little. "I'll do nothing of the sort," she said stiffly. "He asked me to telephone him if I ever came to town—and I'm going to, this very day!"

Irene studied her for a moment, and then she shrugged and picked up her fork again. "My mistake," she said formally. "So sorry. I stuck my neck out—but way out!—for that one. Forget I mentioned it."

Melissa said swiftly, stricken by shame. "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to be rude. You've been awfully kind and good to me and I do appreciate it—honestly I do. It's only that—well, ever since last year I've had the thought of seeing him again in my mind. I've—well, I've counted on it so much."

Irene nodded, still cool and formal. "Then by all means give him a ring. He'll be tickled pink. Wear the yellow crepe when you meet him again. He's a push-over for yellow—it matches the stripe down his back."

Melissa started and her eyes widened. And after a moment she said quietly, "You do know him well, don't you? Only it can't possibly be the same man I know."

"Want to bet on it?" asked Irene drily.

Melissa stared at her, and for a moment great crystal tears were in her eyes. After she'd seen them Irene put out a hand whose nails were long and brilliantly red and patted Melissa's hand in an almost awkward gesture.

"Forget it, babe—Ace Hendricks is a guy who doesn't like women. And—I'm a woman who couldn't help liking Ace — the guy is so damned attractive. And—well, he grinned at me and told me to go chase myself, and I've had it in for him ever since. He's a big-shot gambler, you know. Has one of the swankiest place in town, and its whispered around that he's backed by some of the town's most worthy citizens.

Melissa was bewildered and shaken.

"That doesn't sound a bit like Randy," she observed, crestfallen.

Irene grinned wryly.

"Well, of course it could be a couple of other fellows," admitted Irene, "but I don't think so."

She studied Melissa shrewdly and then she said suddenly, "Tell you what. You go give him a ring and make a date with him, and let me be with you when you meet him. Then if it's not the same guy I know, I'll blow out and leave you two together. If it is the same guy—well, we'll worry about that later."

Melissa hesitated, reluctant. And yet she knew that there was wisdom in what Irene said. If Randy—the Randy who had occupied so large a piece in her dreams and plans and hopes for the past year—was really this "Ace" Hendricks that Irene knew, then she wanted not to see or think of him any more; but if he were not, then— She stood up and moved toward a telephone at the back of the room.

Her hands shook a little as she took down the receiver and with awkward, inexpert hands dialed the number. She made three trials before she succeeded in getting the right number. The man's voice, cautious, wary, said, "Yes?"

"I'd like to speak to Mr. Hendricks, please," she said, steadily her ricks, please," she said steadying her voice with an effort.

"Yeah?" answered the man's voice drily. "Who's calling?"

"Tell him Melissa Marlowe—from down the river," she answered, and waited breathlessly, her heart pounding hard.

There was a brief delay, and then a voice that had the power to make little silver bells tingle deep in her heart said sharply, "Hello? Who the blazes—what's all this hocus-pocus?"

Melissa said, steadying her voice, clinging to the telephone, her eyes bright, "Randy, this is Melissa. Don't you remember me?"

"Melissa?" he repeated, and his voice vibrated a little beneath the tone. "Not the little lamplighter girl!"

"But of course," she answered, and laughter caught at her voice, laughter that was a shining web, crossed by tears that threatened her and made tears that threatened her and said if I ever come to town I was to call you—"

MONDAY AND TUESDAY

"Hellzapoppin'," modestly described the greatest smash-bang, eye-filling, tune-filled show to hit New York in a dozen years, has reached the screen with the original stars, Olsen and Johnson, plus Martha Raye, Hugh Herbert, Mischa Auer, Jane Frazee and Robert Paige. The picture starts Monday at the Majestic theater.

Released by Universal, the Jules Levey Mayfair production boasts many new song hits composed for the picture. Singing and dancing choruses together with a score of unexpected innovations are declared to surpass the many highlights of the great Broadway success.

WEDNESDAY

Hospital zoning confusion, dramatic moments in Blair hospital, and a new Hollywood glamour "discovery" mark "Dr. Kildare's Victory," newest picture in the Kildare series, which plays here Wednesday. Lew Ayres, as Dr. Kildare, and Lionel Barrymore, as Dr. Gillespie, grapple with red tape to save a young intern's position after he saves a life in the wrong ambulance zone. Ann Ayars is the new "discovery."

Humphrey Bogart, star of "All Thru the Night"

THURSDAY

Paramount's newest shudder movie, "Among the Living" will bring the ubiquitous Albert Dekker to the Majestic screen on Thursday night. According to reports Mr. Dekker does a beautiful job of spine tingling as a homicidal maniac who kills and vanishes only to reappear and kill again.

Rated an expert in horror roles, Dekker does a double stint in "Among the Living," playing John Raden, a millionaire mill owner, and also portraying Raden's hopelessly insane twin brother, Paul. To give Dekker a maximum of support, Director Stuart Heisler assembled a distinguished cast including starlets Susan Hayward and Jean Phillips, the veteran Harry Carey, Frances Farmer, Gordon Jones and Maude Eburne.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

"All Through the Night," which will play Friday and Saturday at the Majestic theatre, chalks up a high score of thrills, action and rousing screen excitement. It is the story of an ex-gangster who goes after the Gestapo, using just about the same tactics he used against rival mobs in Prohibition days. With Humphrey Bogart as the gangster, a wonderful supporting cast which includes Kaaren Verne, Conrad Veidt, Judith Anderson, Peter Lorre, Jane Darwell and Frank McHugh. "All Through the Night" spells entertainment plus.

An exciting story of the building and performance of the U. S. Army's new 30-ton medium tanks, most of it revealed on the screen for the first time, is told in the movie short "Tanks," which will be seen at the Majestic theatre, March 19. This one-reel picture is the latest in the series of official film reports on war activities prepared by the Office for Emergency Management. All scenes were filmed from actual production and testing.

Filming locations were at the Chrysler tank arsenal near Detroit, where the 30-ton tank, known as the M-3, first went into mass production; at Fort Knox, Kentucky, where the tanks are put through rigorous tests; and at an unnamed seaport where tanks are shown being shipped for delivery to the fighting fronts.

Orson Welles, one of America's formest producers and actors, volunteered his services to speak the commentary.

TO ADDRESS LIONS

Philip Sharp, member of the staff of the sportsmen's magazine, "Field and Stream," will be the speaker at the Monday evening meeting of the Gettysburg Lions club. His subject will be "The Sporting Industry as It Appears Today." A meeting of the club's board of directors is to follow the club session.

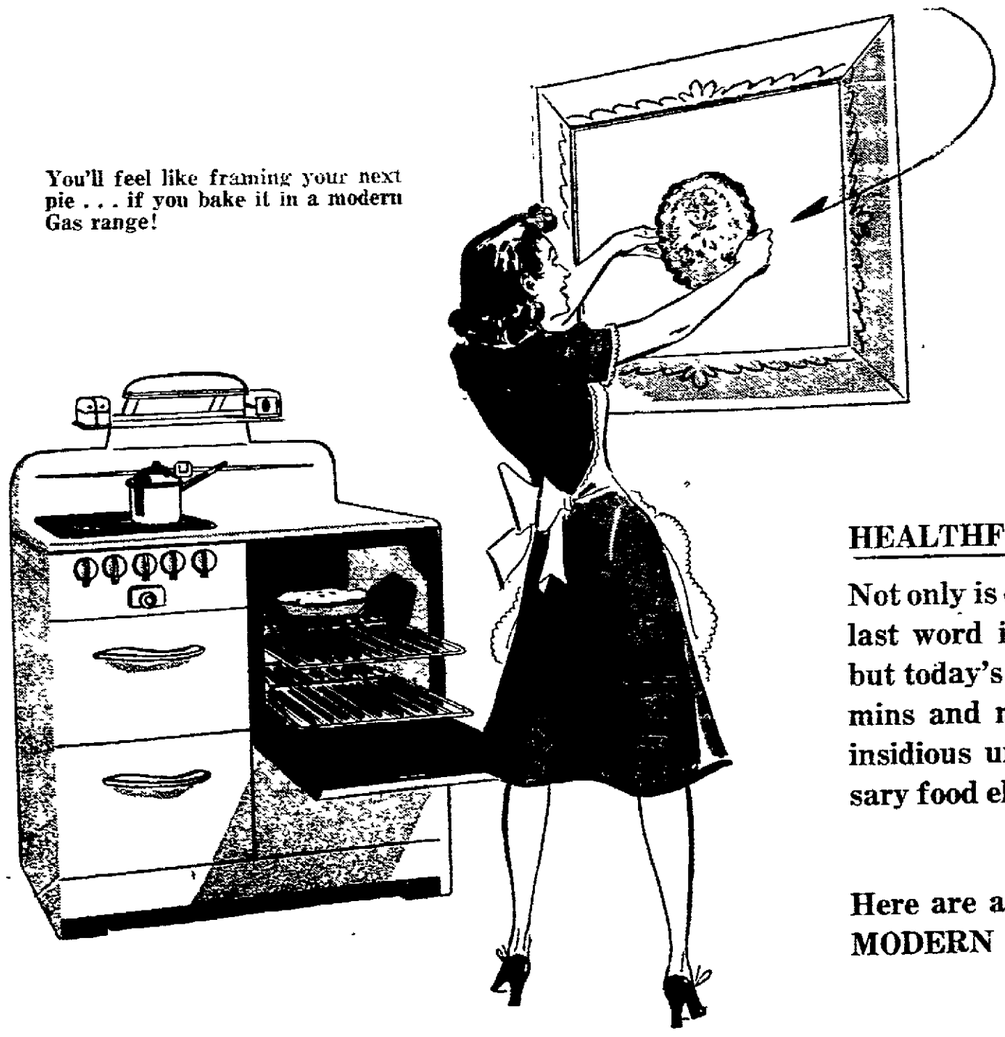
MISS RUTH BEAN
Famous Home Economist, who demonstrates modern Gas cooking at The Gettysburg Times Cooking School, March 17, 18, 19 and 20.



You'll feel like framing your next pie . . . if you bake it in a modern Gas range!

HEALTHFUL FOOD IS IMPORTANT!

Not only is cooking with Gas on a modern Gas range the last word in convenience, time-saving and simplicity, but today's ranges help to conserve all the needed vitamins and minerals and so guard your family against insidious undernourishment. All too often the necessary food elements are boiled or cooked away.

Here are a few of the many things you can do with a MODERN GAS RANGE.

"WATERLESS COOKING" that saves health-giving food vitamins and minerals.

LOW-TEMPERATURE ROASTING for more savory foods and minimum meat shrinkage.

CLEAN, SPEEDY BROILING without smoking, sputtering, burning.

PRECISION BAKING — Place cakes anywhere in oven and always get same uniform results.

KITCHEN LEISURE—Read a book, plan other menus, while your Gas range cooks dinner.
